BALLOONIST IS RESCUED BY STEAMER

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The dirigible balloon America, carrying Walter Wellman and his crew of five, was wrecked at sea and abandoned. Wellman and the entire crew of five were rescued and are on their way to New York on board the steamship Trent of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's line, plying between Bermuda and New York. This information was conveyed in an official report from the captain of the Trent to his office to-day in the following dispatch:

"At 5 a. m. to-day sighted Wellman airship America in distress. Signalled by Morse code that she required assistance and help. After three hours' manoeuvring, with fresh winds blowing, took Wellman and entire crew on board. They were hauled safely on board. The America was abandoned in latitude 35 degrees 43 minutes north, longitude 68 degrees 18 minutes west. DOWN."

Down is captain of the Trent.

Captain Down later notified his company that the Trent would arrive in New York to-morrow. According to the description given by him of the disaster to the airship, she was abandoned about 250 miles north by east of Cape Hatteras.

The steamer Trent of the Royal Packet Line, that rescued Walter Wellman at sea, travels between Bermuda and New York, and is due in New York some time to-morrow. The fact that Wellman was on the course taken by this vessel would tend to show that he was much farther south than he should have been had he followed the course of the Atlantic liners.

LAST HEARD FROM OFF SIASCONSETT.

From 12:45 p. m. Sunday until Captain Down's message was received shortly after noon to-day, the Atlantic had been swept from wireless stations along the cost. The America was last head of off Siasconsett, Mass. At 12:45 Sunday afternoon the wireless operator in the Marconi station at Siasconsett sent a query directed to the America asking if all on board were well.

The reply, very feeble and indistinct came back. It consisted of the single word "Yes."

It was then estimated that the America was from 100 to 300 miles east of the Massachusetts coast, although her exact location was doubtful.

At that time and since the weather bureaus have reported mild weather off the Atlantic seaboard, with the exception of an electrical storm off Sable Island, 100 miles off the Nova Scotian coast.

Although no official advices have been received as to how the balloon was wrecked, it is believed that it fell a victim to the Sable Island electrical storm and was wrecked in a tempest of lightning and sharp contrary winds.

Balloon Drifts South.

The America had evidently been blown out far to sea and drifted down past the gateways to the harbors along the coast between Boston and the southern ports. At 11 a. m. Sunday a message was received at Siasconsett, which said that the motors were shut down owing to the dragging of the equilabrator in the water, which gave the airship a jarring motion injurious to the engines.

At that time it was reported that no damage had been done and no mention was made of bad weather. At noon Sunday the last message but one from the America said that Wellman believed he was southwest of Nantucket.

The America was equipped with all instruments used by navigators and many had been especially constructed. Among these was a barometer for the forecasting of future weather.

Drifting at Wind's Mercy.

The original plan was to turn the America landward if the weather became too dangerously threatening. As events have transpired, it is believed that the America was taken unawares by the storm probably late Sunday and has been drifting about in the air at the mercy of winds every since.

The fact that the wireless instruments were working on the America to-day indicated that the balloon has been inquiring for help through the agency of her wireless, although experts thought that probably the operator, Jack Irwin, had husbanded the precious electric "juice" and did not send calls for help except at long intervals.

The weather off the coast all along the Atlantic seaboard has been foggy and it is considered probable that Wellman did not know exactly where he was drifting.

Judging from the information received it is believed that Wellman has broken all dirigible balloon records. According to Captain Downs' report the America was in the air 72 hours.

Up in the Air Three Days.

Having left Atlantic City at 8:03 o'clock Saturday morning it was almost three days to the minute that the crew of the America were aloft. Captain Downs said that he first sighted the America at 5 a. m. to-day, although the balloon was manoeuvred in wind currents for three hours before the men were taken off.

The old record for continuous flight was made on May 31, 1909, by Count Zeppelin, who remained aloft for thirty-seven hours. Wellman doubled this.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE UNION TO ENTERTAIN

Colonel Murphy, Lieutenant Colonel Reilly and Major Gibbons of the Catholic Total abstinence Union Regiment of Wilkesbarre, Pa., will be guests of the members of St. Patrick's T. A. and L. Society at a special meeting in the rooms, No. 431 Dudley street, Roxbury, to-night. Action will be taken on the formation of a military company. An entertainment has been provided for the visitors. A collation will follow.

ARREST CONDUCTOR ON TICKET CHARGE

N. Norris Hall, a conductor on the Boston & Maine road, and James A. Barnes, a grocer at No. 175 Endicott street, this city, both living in Medford, were arrested today by United States deputy marshals on the charge of violating interstate commerce laws. It is charged that Hall accepted for transportation business cards of Barnes when presented by passengers in lieu of tickets.

HELD AS GANG MEMBER.

Patrick J. Duran, eighteen, of Baxter street, South Boston, was found guilty in the South Boston District Court to-day of assault and battery upon William Molloy, Jr., of No. 30 Middle street, South Boston, and was sentenced to two months in the House of Correction. He appealed. Molloy and his father were set upon by a band of young men in D street last night. The elder Molloy is now in the City Hospital. The son suffered a broken nose. He says Duran was in the band, but does not specifically identify him as his assailant.

FOR FOSS IF RILEY GETS OUT

The Hamlin men on the committee of four, representing the Democratic State convention in Faneuil Hall, to-day agreed to select Congressman Eugene N. Foss as the Democratic candidate for Governor, provided that Thomas P. Riley would withdraw as a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor in favor of Thomas F. Cassidy of Adams.

Charles H. Cole, manager of the Hamlin campaign, brought this information to Democratic State headquarters.

Immediately after this efforts were made to reach Mr. Riley. The committee will take up this matter at a meeting this afternoon.

Should Riley withdraw, and should Frederick J. Mansfield, selected as the head of the ticket pro tem. by the convention, withdraw, the committee of four, it was announced, would select Congressman Foss, as the result of the poll of the delegates to the convention by letter, as announced yesterday, when Foss beat Hamlin by eleven votes.

Macleod Sees Quincy.

While the committee was waiting at the headquarters for some news from Riley, Chairman Macleod went out and met Josiah Quincy and Charles H. Innes (Mr. Innes is an expert Republican), and they had a chat.

At 1.55 Congressman Foss went to No. 3 Beacon street to the office of Mr. Riley. There he found, besides Mr. Riley, Daniel J. Kiley, who is Mr. Riley's law partner, and the trio went into conference.

It was generally believed to-day that Foss will appear on the ballot as a candidate for Governor no matter what action may be taken by the Committee of Four. He has filed nomination papers as a "Democratic Progressive" candidate through his private secretary, George M. Harlow of Plymouth. His friends said to-day that this nomination will stand whether or not Frederick W. Mansfield, who has the regular Democratic nomination, withdraws.

Mansfield Urged to Stick.

Mansfield was urged to-day to stick to the finish by a large number of friends, especially by men prominent in the labor world. These men told him that if he withdraws, the labor vote will go gallavanting all over the ballot on Election Day, and that it is up to him to hold the labor vote together by continuing as a candidate.

The argument was also made to Mansfield to-day that when he was nominated for Governor by the Faneuil Hall convention, it was generally supposed that both James H. Vahey and Eugene N. Foss between whom the convention could not make a selection, would get out of the contest and make way for the nomination of a third man.

It was also argued to Mansfield that Hamlin had a substantial lead over Foss in the replies by mail from delegates outside of Boston and that the Foss votes in Boston, with every delegate checked up and watched, indicate not much more than that Fitzgerald and Lomasney are with Foss.

ONE SAILOR ACCUSED OF KNIFING ANOTHER

Henry P. Williams, a sailor on the schooner Colburn, anchored in President Roads, was arraigned in the Municipal Court to-day charged with assault and battery, with a knife, upon William Buckley, another sailor on board the ship. It is charged that Williams attacked Buckley after an argument, and inflicted a severe wound in his side. Sailors brought the wounded man ashore and notified the harbor police at Station 8. A detail sent down the harbor arrested Williams.

KENTUCKY MARSHAL SHOT FROM AMBUSH

HENDERSON, Ky., Oct. 18.—While bringing a prisoner from Grayson County to Henderson, Marshal John T Skaggs was assassinated in Central Park and his prisoner liberated. Skaggs arrested Chester Fentress, charged with stealing a horse and buggy and eloping with a sixteen year old girl, brought him to Henderson and was on his way to jail through the park when the assassins, hidden in the bushes, shot him twice in the chest and made their escape with Fentress.

GOOD BUYING IN COTTON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The cotton market opened to-day with prices ranging from five points higher to three points lower. Following an unsettled period good buying set in, particularly affecting January. Cables were favorable.

COOMBS PITCHES AGAINST BROWN IN SECOND GAME

BATTING ORDER.

CHICAGO.	PHILADELPHIA.
Hofman, centre field.	Collins, second base.
Chance, first base.	Baker, third base.
Zimmerman, second base	Davis, first base.
Steinfeldt, third base.	Murphy, right field.
Tinker, shortstop	Barry, shortstop.
Kling, catcher.	Thomas, catcher.
Brown, pitcher.	Coombs, pitcher.

Umpires—Rigler and O'Day, Connolly and Sheridan.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—Upon the three fingers of Mordecai Brown the Chicago Cubs pinned their hopes to-day for winning the second game in the series with the Philadelphia Athletics for the championship of the world. Jack Coombs was selected to oppose the veteran Brown, who from past experience knows what is expected in world's championship games.

If Philadelphia was baseball mad yesterday when the Athletics defeated the Cubs to the tune of 4 to 1, it was completely insane to-day. Early to-day a line had gathered before Shibe Park waiting impatiently for the gates to open. The weather gave promise of cloudiness, but there were no indications of rain.

Following the overthrow of the Cubs the betting veered to-day and the Philadelphians were the favorites at odds of 10 to 8 in to-day's game.

Bets were made this morning at odds of 10 to 9 that the Athletics would win the series.

Celebrated All Night.

Dawn to-day still found the celebration of the Quaker City fans in progress. Bonfires glowed and others who celebrated the winning of their bets by spending their earnings were noisily cheering and predicting another victory for this afternoon. Thousands of fans paraded the streets and fireworks were set off at intervals through the night. Some of the more ardent fans decorated their homes with bunting and flags.

According to Mack's plans, he will put Bender against the Cubs again on Thursday. There will be no game to-morrow, both teams being en route for Chicago, and the Indian will have plenty of time to rest up.

The victory of Bender under the circumstances sets him up in the minds of some of the baseball experts as the peer to Christy Mathewson, the wonder of the box.

Chance Expects to Win.

France Chance, manager of the Cubs, was not dispirited over the initial defeat of his team.

"That was a bad beginning, but we will retrieve our loss," said Chance this afternoon. "We have figured out that it takes one day to get going, and anyhow we will do our best work at home. We are not downcast at all."

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, was unable to hide his jubilance, although he declined to forecast how many games the Athletics would take.

Baseball experts looked to this afternoon's game as the crucial test of the series. It was believed that if the Philadelphians took the second game nothing stood between them and the championship.

From the indications this morning the attendance at the second game would possibly go over 30,000.

To-day's game was essentially the hope of the National League advocates, from President Thomas J. Lynch down to the lowliest of Phillies' supporters in this city.

The reason for this was shown in the fact that "Three Fingered" Brown, the old standby of the Cubs, was slated to oppose John Coombs of the Athletics and the National League rooters evidently pinned their faith on the experience of the "Three" fingered one to pull him through against the Athletics' star.

On the other hand, the American League enthusiasts said that, backed up by yesterday's victory, Coombs would be invincible and make good his season's showing.

While the teams were practicing, the gates were opened and two automobiles from the Chalmers-Detroit Company were run in abreast to the home plate. The players came in from the field and lined around the machines.

The representatives of the Chalmers-Detroit Company called for Ty Cobb and Napoleon Lajoie to come forward and claim their cars.

Ty Cobb took his position beside his car while Lajoie was represented by proxy, he not being in Philadelphia. The cars were filled with celebrities present and were driven around the park amid the cheering of the thousands of fans.

After Ty Cobb had his little short ride he went up into the press box where he was showered with congratulations.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Sheckard walked. Schulte forced Sheckard, Collins to Barry. Hofman walked. Chance singled, filling the bases. Zimmerman flied to Strunk, scoring Schulte, Hoyman going to third and Chance to second. Steinfeldt fanned. INE RUN.

Strunk struck out. Kling got the ball to first in time to catch him. Lord out, Steinfeldt to Chance. Collins dropped a Texas Leaguer to right field. Collins stole second. Brown threw Baker out to Chance. NO RUNS.

WILL DEBATE BIGGER BOSTON

The Greater Boston question is to be discussed by the Chamber of Commerce Assembly at its meeting and luncheon tomorrow noon at the American House.

The discussion will bear upon the specific question whether a special committee shall be appointed "to take such measures as may be necessary to bring about a general recognition of the fact that Boston and other cities and towns in the metropolitan district are commercially and industrially a unit."

Several of the Chamber committees are urging the necessity of campaigning actively to get Boston the commercial rating it deserves as a centre of 1,500,000 population.

More than 150 members are expected at to-morrow's meeting, most of them residents of various suburbs in the so-called metropolitan district. Discussion will be informal. Ideas will be sought as to the best method of presenting the Greater Boston subject so as to obtain the due commercial rating for the city.

CIDER DRINKERS GO DRY.

MIDDLEBORO, Oct. 18.—The lovers of cider, both sweet and hard, will doubtless be disappointed this year, for the output of that fluid in these parts will be limited. The crop of apples was ruined last June by the heavy frosts.

Almost everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

FOUR CUBS IN A TAXI CRASH

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—Four members of the Chicago National League team narrowly escaped death in a collision between a taxicab in which they were riding and a mail wagon and an automobile on Twenty-fourth street this afternoon.

Steinfeldt, Tinker, Schulte and Hofman were in the taxi on their way to the world series game with the Athletics.

All of the men were badly shaken up, but escaped injury by jumping, though the rumor spread around that all four had been killed.

THIEF REFUSES TO WAIT FOR ARREST

MIDDLEBORO, Oct. 18. — Herbert Batchelder, the son of Police Officer Herbert Batchelder of Montello street, saw a suspicious looking man skulking about his barn. The man entered and young Batchelder, thinking he was a thief, locked the barn door. While waiting for his father to return young Batchelder complimented himself on his good work. Finally the elder Batchelder and another officer arrived, and when both went to the barn they found that a rear window was wide open and the man had left the premises, leaving a note bidding them "good bye."

FINED FOR ABUSING HORSE.

In the Somerville Police Court, on complaint of the Massachusetts S. P. C. A., Samuel Weisman of Somerville was fined $20 to-day for driving a lame horse.

WOUNDS GIRL, THEN HIDES AND KILLS HIMSELF

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 18.—Peter George, a clerk in the candy store at No. 41 Manton avenue, today shot his sweetheart, Mary Pecord, three times, wounding her critically, then fled to the cellar of the building, where the police found him dead, a bullet wound over the heart.

George was due to arrive at the candy store at 6 o'clock in the morning. The girl got there at 8 o'clock. This morning George was there when the girl arrived. At ten minutes after 8 o'clock the proprietor came in. George immediately went to the back of the store and put on his coat. He walked to the front door. Then he turned, drawing a 38-calibre revolver from his pocket.

He fired three shots at the girl, two of which took effect, one in the left side of her body and the second in the left side of her neck. George fled.

A passer-by called Dr. Cortis, who, seeing that the girl was in a critical condition, rushed her to the Rhode Island hospital.

The shooting is said to have been due to the girl's refusal to marry the young man.

RANDOLPH MAN IS DAMAGE SUIT WINNER

A jury in the Norfolk County Superior Court, civil session, sitting before Judge Sherman at Dedham to-day, brought in a verdict for the defendant in a $5,000 suit brought by Herbert L. Paul of Randolph against the Old Colony Street Railroad. Paul asked for the sum for injuries received on January 1 last. Paul was driving a sleigh loaded with bales of hay on Main street, Randolph. One of the bales fell off and Paul was on the ground attempting to put the hay back on the sleigh, when an electric crashed into his sleigh.

ROAD MUST PAY COUNTY.

The Supreme Court has overruled the exceptions of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad and the company will have to pay $100 to Middlesex County for obstructing Cambridge street, Cambridge, for more than ten minutes, on October [illegible], 1909.

GIANTS-YANKS GAMES RIVAL WORLD SERIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Sport rivalling that in the world's championship baseball series was anticipated this afternoon in the fourth clash between the Giants and the Yankees at the Polo grounds.

It was considered highly likely that Christy Matthewson would be sent into the box for the Giants, but Manager Hal Chase of the Yankees was undecided as to his pitcher, indicating that he would send either Hughes or Fisher to the mound.

The betting was usually at even money to-day, one result of the great game yesterday at American League Park, when the two teams battled for ten innings with a final score of 5 to 5, the game being called on account of darkness.

The weather was favorable, with sunshine tempered by a blanket of haze from forest fires.

Both teams have profited by baseball luck so far in the series. Of the four games played, the Giants have won two. The Yankees have won one and the other was tied. The game this afternoon was looked upon virtually as a play-off of the tie.

WILL SEEK TO MAKE MARCH 17 A HOLIDAY

John D. Connors of Ward 17, who has received the Democratic nomination for the House of Representatives, which is equivalent to an election, will, when the Legislature convenes in January, present a bill calling for the enactment of a law making Evacuation Day, March 17, a legal holiday.

TROOPS CALLED TO QUIET CAIRO RIOTS

CAIRO, Egypt, Oct. 18.—Following a street battle between rioters and the police in which a score or more persons were injured, troops were called out here to-day. The mob violence grew out of the strike of four thousand railroad employes. The mob continues in a threatening mood and serious clashes with the military are feared.

A Want Advt. is often the road to fortune.

BALLOONS IN BIG RACE HEAD FOR CANADA

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—The balloon Isle de France, Leblanc, pilot, the favorite in the international balloon races which started from St. Louis yesterday, passed over Zion City, thirty-six miles north of Chicago at 6:35 a. m. It was at a height of 1,500 feet and passed out over Lake Michigan. A note dropped by Leblanc said all was well and that the air current seemed to be carrying him toward Canada.

The balloons started from St. Louis as if headed for this city, and there had been no change in the wind early to-day to shift them from this course. Indications were that the winner would land in Canada, instead of sailing east, as did the contender last year. The Hamburg III. passed over several Illinois towns, 1,500 feet up. Another balloon, unknown, but thought to be the Azores of E. Messner, passed over Carrollton, Ill., forty-eight miles from St. Louis. Previously five balloons were sighted near Nachins, Ill.

One of the balloons which started in the International Races was sighted over Milwaukee at 7 a. m. to-day. It was travelling rapidly in a southeasterly direction and apparently about 2,000 feet in the air. Those who witnessed the bag were unable to identify it.

A balloon landed on Trumbull's farm at Caledonia, Wis., at 7 a. m. to-day. Caledonia is six miles north of Racine. The balloon descended after flying over the lake front.

Three of the balloons passed over Janesville, Wis., between dawn and 8 a. m. The America II., Hawley pilot, dropped low enough to report all well.

The America II. passed over Somers, near Kenosha, Wis., at 7 a. m. The balloon was taking a northerly course and the man in it shouted that all was well.

The German balloon Dusseldorf, Gericke pilot, passed over Big Bend, Wis., at 7:10 a. m.

CRIPPEN PLEADS NOT GUILTY AT OPENING OF GREAT LONDON TRIAL

LONDON, Oct. 18.—"Not guilty, my Lord." With these words spoken in a terse, low voice by Dr. H. H. Crippen, the American physician charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Belle Elmore Crippen, the American music hall artist, the internationally famous trial was started in Old Bailey court to-day.

Crowds thronged the streets before the ancient seat of justice and within were scores of fashionably dressed women who were frank in their expressions of disappointment because Miss Ethel Claire LeNeve, charged with being an accessory after the fact, was not present. She will be arraigned later. It was a dramatic scene with the background set in a mass of humanity.

The crown's prosecutor, Muir, caused a sensation as he opened the case.

"We charge that this man wilfully murdered his wife in order to get her money and remove her as the obstacle which prevented his marriage to Ethel LeNeve, his typist," thundered the King's counsel.

There was a flutter among the women present. Gold mounted lorgnettes were raised and the imperturbable Crippen scanned with fresh interest.

Many Women at Trial.

Crippen was brought to Old Bailey in the prison van with other prisoners. He apparently felt no fear, for he calmly gazed about him during the ride from the jail to the court house.

There was an imposing array upon the bench. Lord Chief Justice Alverstone presided in person. Lord Mayor Knill and Lord Mayor-Elect Strong sat with the jury. The sheriffs and city recorder sat behind the solemn chief justice.

There were less than 100 seats available but nearly 5,000 applications had been made. A shade of anxiety passed over the face of the diminutive prisoner, as daintily attired in a frock coat and gray trousers, he took his seat.

Crippen might have been attired for a gay social function. He was groomed in strict taste. Always a place of utmost solemnity, the scene presented in the crowded court chamber to-day was almost sepulchral. The chief justice, attired in his black gown and his great towering wig of white, gazed solemnly over the room. When Crippen was called to the bar a hush fell over the court room.

Conviction Is Demanded.

Crippen from his position between his counsel, Barristers A. A. Tobin, Huntley Jenkins and Arthur Newton arose and walked before the chief justice, who had decided to preside because of the importance of the case.

His plea in, he returned to his seat and cast a quick glance about the room. The King's counsel began the speech upon which depends in great part the life or death of the little doctor.

It was evident that the bulk of the work would fall upon Solicitors Jenkins and Tobin, as Mr. Newton sat back and seemed to be acting in an advisory capacity. The jury was secured with little formality. Crippen's counsel challenged three of the jurors, and they were replaced by others.

The King's counsel pleaded in a dramatic manner for the conviction of the prisoner. In a booming voice he pointed out that the domestic tragedy of the Crippens was caused by a false love and greed for gold. The address was the most scathing of a prisoner ever heard in a British court.

"For three years this defendant carried on an intrigue with Ethel LeNeve, whom he desired to marry," exclaimed Barrister Muir.

The ghost of a smile passed over the prisoner's face as this charge was made. However, those who watched him keenly believed that his affected sangfroid was in danger of disappearing. "There were two obstacles to the marriage of this man to his mistress," continued Prosecutor Muir. "But both of these would have been removed by the death of his wife. He needed money badly and his designs were to get this and remove his wife at the same time."

ELEANOR HALL WEDS EAST ORANGE PASTOR

Miss Eleanor McMaster Hall, a daughter of the late Charles Cuthbert Hall, president of the Union Theological Seminary of New York, and Rev. Robert Russell Wicks, pastor of the Arlington Avenue Congregational Church of East Orange, N. J., were married at the home of Mrs. Charles Cuthbert Hall, No. 394 Harvard street, Cambridgeport, this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Albert Parker Fitch, D. D., president of the Andover Theological Seminary, assisted by Rev. James Austin Richards, pastor of the Mt. Vernon Congregational Church. The bride was attended by Miss Anita Merle-Smith of New York and Miss Catherine Stanley Hall, her sister, of Cambridge, as maid of honor. Misses Elizabeth Beale, Margaret Williston, Bettina Savage, Dorothy Hildreth, all of Cambridge, acted as ribbon [illegible]. Henry D. Hurd of Utica, N. Y., was best man.

NEWBURYPORT DOCTOR NOW HAS A BRIDE

NEWBURYPORT, Oct. 18.—Dr. Frederick Tigh and Miss Amelia Hennessy were married to-day in the Church of the Immaculate Conception by the Rev. William H. Ryan. Mayor Robert E. Burke was best man and Miss Florence E. Hennessy, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, No. 139 State street. Dr. and Mrs. Tigh will tour the West, and on their return will reside at No. 131 High street. Dr. Tigh is on the staff at the Anna Jaques Hospital.

SAILORS IN DECK FIGHT WITH KNIVES

Henry T. Williams is under arrest in the East Boston Relief Hospital, charged with inflicting injuries upon William Buckley, who is in the Relief Hospital with three knife wounds in his left side. The men are sailors on the schooner Alice M. Colburn, which is anchored off Castle Island. A dispute arose at breakfast to-day and Buckley is alleged to have attacked Williams.

FIREMEN OF QUINCY GET A PAY INCREASE

By a vote of 18 to 1 the Quincy Council has decided to increase the pay of all captains, lieutenants and permanent men employed in the Fire Department of that city, as well as the superintendent of fire alarm, at a total cost estimated at $2,300. Chief Williams is not included in the order, which goes into effect January 1. Councilman Sandberg of Ward 4 cast the only dissenting vote.

AGREEMENT IN RUSSELL CASE IS NOW DENIED

Following a report published in Boston today that "Dakota Dan" Russell had been accepted as the brother of William C. Russell and the famous fight over the $500,000 estate settled, there were vigorous denials made in behalf of the estate, while "Dakota Dan" said that there had "been some talk" of a peaceable arrangement being effected and that it looked as though it had been done.

An emphatic denial that any negotiations looking to a settlement of the case had been made or ever would be was made in the Superior Court at East Cambridge today by Attorney Robert W. Nason, when he appeared before Justice James M. Morton regarding a motion for a continuance of the case to the next session of the court.

Lawyer Simpson Absent.

Mystery was added to the case by the absence from the court of Senator Simpson, attorney for "Dakota Dan" Russell, the claimant, by "Dakota Dan" Russell and Attorney Nelson C. Sheldon. There was no representative of the claimant in the $500,000 will contest present.

Attorney Nason, Attorney Eugene Upton, William C. Russell, Ferdinand Almy and "Fresno Dan" Russell arrived in the court room just before Justice Morton appeared. When court was called Attorney Nason called the attention of the Court to stories published in morning papers to the effect that "Dakota Dan" Russell had been accepted as the real brother of William C. Russell, and that the case had been settled. With considerable show of feeling he said:

"I want to state that no negotiations have ever been made or ever will be made for a settlement of this case. The reason that a continuance was asked for is because Senator Simpson wishes to go to North Dakota on business."

"Then I understand," said the Court, "that the case is continued by agreement."

"Yes, your honor," replied Attorney Nason.

Justice Morton ordered the case continued to April.

In the corridor of the court Attorney Nason addressed the newspaper men and reiterated his statements even more forcibly that there would never be any settlement of the case with "Dakota Dan" Russell.

Statement by Simpson.

This afternoon Senator Leslie A. Simpson, senior counsel for "Dakota Dan" Russell, said:

"There has been no settlement of the Russell case as yet."

Attorney Nelson L. Sheldon, junior counsel for "Dakota Dan," said:

"The Russell case is not settled. This is emphatic. It stands just where it did when Judge Lawton rendered his decision. There have been several conferences, and we finally agreed to continue the case until next April. At that time it will go on again. There has been some talk of referring the case to a Master, as it would take so much time before a Justice, but this has not been definitely settled.

"I know of no statement by William C. Russell in which he has acknowledged Daniel Blake Russell, our client. I certainly would know of it if he had. Senator Simpson will return to Dakota, but he will come back to take up the case in the Spring."

At his home in Melrose to-day "Dakota Dan" Russell said:

"I know nothing about the matter. I left Attorney Simpson at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon in conference with lawyers from the other side, and he told me the last thing to be sure to be in court this morning. About 9 o'clock last evening, he telephoned to me and in my absence Mrs. Russell took the message, telling me not to come over to court to-day, that there would be nothing doing.

"Mr. Simpson did not give any reasons, and as I have not yet seen him this morning, I do not know the exact reasons. I am to meet him later to-day. I cannot tell whether a settlement has been made or not. There has been some talk of a peaceable arrangement being made during the past few days. It looks as if something had been done. That is all I can tell you."

John K. Berry, of the law firm of Berry & Upton, attorneys for the William C. Russell estate, said to-day:

Settlement Is Denied.

"William C. Russell has not identified Dakota Dan Russell as his brother, and he never will. The stories to the effect that a settlement has been made are all lies. There is absolutely nothing to them. By an agreement of counsel on both sides the case has been continued until next Spring when it will be fought out to a finish."

Robert W. Nason, of counsel for the Russell estate, came out in an equally vigorous denial.

Mr. Nason made this statement: "There has absolutely been no settlement in this case. There never will be a settlement. It will be a fight to the finish. Every story that has been circulated to that effect is wholly without foundation. It is scandalous, and I think it is high time that the fact should be known. Senator Simpson made the request that there be a postponement, in order that he could attend to his legislative duties out West."

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS
Up to Midnight London Time

Crippen's Bank Stops Payments.

LONDON—The Charing Cross Bank has suspended payments and a receiver has been appointed. The bank's owner is Alfred Carpenter. It has many branches in Great Britain. Its advertised assets were £1,607,000. Its deposits are estimated at £1,000,000. Dr. Crippen, now awaiting trial for the murder of his wife, and the woman he is accused of killing, had a joint deposit of £600 in the bank.

German Princess Auto Victim.

GERMAN—Princess Marie Anna of Schaumburg-Lippe, wife of the reigning Prince, and their nineteen-year-old son, Prince Stefan, were seriously hurt in an automobile accident. The Princess's court chamberlain, Baron Engelbrecht, and her lady in waiting, Baroness von Toll, were also injured.

No Judge of Dressmaking.

LONDON—A judge at Wellingborough who was hearing a case against a dressmaker admitted that he was unable to decide whether the costume, the cause of the action, fit or not. He therefore ordered all the women in the court room to form a jury and adjudicate the issue. He ruled in accordance with their verdict.

Turkish Ministers Resign.

CONSTANTINOPLE—Because of complications over the army budget four important members of the cabinet resigned. They were the War Minister, Mahmoud Shefket Pasha; the Minister of the Navy, Vice-Admiral Arifhikmet; the Minister of Finance, Djavid Bey; and the Minister of the Interior, Talaat Bey.

Philippine Surplus a Million.

MANILA—The Philippine Legislature is now in session. In his message Governor-General Forbes says that the finances of the Philippines are satisfactory. The fiscal year closes with a surplus in excess of $1,000,000.

SPECIAL MILK COMMISSION IS NOW PROPOSED

Important changes in the Massachusetts milk laws are to be asked of the incoming Legislature by the farmers and milk producers of the State, according to James L. Harrington, secretary of the Massachusetts Cattle Owners' Association, and ex-president of the Fitchburg Milk Dealers and Producers' Association.

The milk producers want a new law providing for the taking of the situation entirely away from the health boards, and the creation of a practical commission, to be given absolute control of the making and enforcement of the laws. A bill providing for such changes will be introduced in the Legislature, Mr. Harrington says.

He has been in conference with milk producers all over the State and he finds sentiment is strong for this new plan. The present system of having the health board in charge of the milk situation, Mr. Harrington says, has proven a failure. He adds:

"If Mr. Walker, the new head of the cattle bureau, makes good, and there doesn't appear to be anything to indicate that he will not, there is a movement to be started which the farmers think will settle this milk business fairly and with some semblance of equity.

"The first thing will be a new bill for the creation of a special milk commission, this commission to consist of three or five men, at least one from the ranks of the producers and one or two from the consuming public."

HOLD JEFFRIES FOR SHACKFORD'S DEATH

Robert F. Jeffries, colored, charged by the police with the murder of Ernest Shackford, of No. 18 Albion street, South End, on October 11, was to-day held without bail for the grand jury by Judge Bolster of the Municipal Court. Shackford is also colored. Jeffries was employed as a guard at a motion picture theatre in Castle Square. The two men went to a house on Albion street, where Jeffries claims that Shackford drew a revolver and attempted to shoot him. Jeffries also had a revolver with which he shot Shackford.

"Swift & Company's sales of Fresh Beef in Boston for the week ending Saturday, October 15th, averaged 8.50 cents per pound."

PORTUGAL MAY FORM ALLIANCE WITH VATICAN

ROME, Oct. 18.—The possibility of an alliance between the new republic of Portugal and the Roman Catholic Church, by which the Vatican will officially recognize the new government upon condition that some of the Catholic orders be allowed to remain in the country, has developed. It was made known to-day that Monsignor J. Tonti, papal nuncio to Lisbon, who was recalled by the aVtican, has been ordered to remain in Lisbon pending the outcome of negotiations which are in a tentative stage at present.

Notwithstanding the declaration of Pope Pius, during the progress of the Portuguese revolution, that the Vatican would never recognize Portugal as a republic, a strong feeling has developed among the Republican leaders in Portugal that it would be diplomatic to come to a friendly agreement with the Roman Catholic church upon condition that the Vatican recognize the new regime without delay. Realizing the tremendous powers of the Vatican the new government has indicated that it is ready to respect the church although other conditions, which would be set forth in a treaty between the Portuguese provisional government and Rome, have not been divulged.

The New Gilchrist Store Is a Revelation to All—The Selling Is Tremendous

In all of our business career we've never known such selling—from the opening to the closing hours—this great store with its immense new annex is crowded to its limits—we would be disappointed if conditions were otherwise—we expected the greatest buying ever witnessed in Boston and we prepared for it. We told you in Sunday's papers—that advertised values were here in unlimited quantities and we're living up to every word we said then. We're giving Boston the greatest values they've ever known, and there's enough of everything to go round. No disappointments—more than 600 extra salespeople—big additional aisle space—wonderful stocks of merchandise and absolutely unmatchable prices combine in forming a buying incentive unequalled, and all Boston seems to be showing its appreciation.

Boston Pays Tribute to Mrs. Howe at Funeral Thursday

REV. DR. AMES, VENERABLE MINISTER, WILL OFFICIATE AT SERVICES.

The funeral service of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, which will take place in Boston on Thursday afternoon, will be one of the most impressive events that ever took place in this city. Boston saw Julia Ward Howe grow old with an ever-increasing veneration. Knowing that the whole country held her as their own only increased the affection concentrated upon her in this city.

So the great, heart-throbbing love that this city felt for the distinguished woman will be shown at the last earthly rites over her body.

It is not straining language to say that Julia Ward Howe was the idol of Boston.

TEARS OF SYMPATHY FOR GREAT WOMAN.

There will be tears shed at her funeral, but they will not be unhappy tears, the tears that fall out of sympathy and love while through them [illegible] that Julia Ward Howe [illegible] in [illegible] eyes [illegible] word.

The body [illegible] to Boston from Middletown, R. I., [illegible] of Newport, by a special [illegible] the train that leaves [illegible] Thursday morning.

Venerable Pastor to Preside.

The funeral will be at the Church of the Disciples, corner of [illegible] and Jersey streets, Boston. The venerable pastor of this church, the Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ames, will have the service in charge.

Mrs. Howe was a regular attendant at this church. On one of her recent birthdays Dr. Ames said of Mrs. Howe:

"Through the storm and stress of the world Mrs. Howe has always kept aloft, holding a life-preserver to our faith, hope and love."

On the list of pallbearers are five grandsons and three grandsons-in-law. The grandsons are John Richards, Henry Hall Richards, John Howe Hall, Henry Marion Hall and Samuel Prescott Hall. The others are Dr. Hugh Mitchell, Charles Wiggin and Carlton [illegible].

Burial will be in the family lot in Mt. Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge.

From all over the world have come messages of love and sympathy to the relatives of the wonderful woman. They have come in cables, telegrams and in letters. They are a mighty tribute to the possibilities of womanhood.

Mrs. Julia Ward Howe's Last Message to Women

Written for the Boston Sunday American, June 5, 1910, and Copyrighted.

We must all live in the present, whatever our age may be. Let our motto be "Up to Date!"

There are some women who are like forgotten anchors that hold back the ship; do not be a forgotten anchor.

I would have every girl who wishes to go to college make every effort to do so. Education is the great preparation for life.

Beware of the treadmill of domestic duties, for that is what they may become if at the right and proper seasons you do not spread your wings and rise above them.

The legitimate claims of home and family are never to be neglected or postponed.

Do not think that you must resign all claims to the higher education because it may not be possible for you to go to college.

Study Greek. It's better worth having than a diamond necklace.

Remember that education is the key with which the door of the mind is opened.

I do not think it lessens a girl's chance to marry if she goes to college, but I do think she is likely to attract a different sort of man.

I think as a whole women are nearer to a general good taste in dress than they were fifty years ago. We should try to avoid the two extremes of giving too much or too little time and thought to the matter of dress.

I pray this generation of women to guard its high post as guardian of the future. Let it leave to its children a noble standard of womanhood, free, pure, and, above all, laborious.

The figure of the infant Christ dwells always in our mind, accompanied by that gracious mother who gave Him to the world. Let the fact of this great gift prefigure to us the august office of Woman.

TRIBUTE PAID BY T. W. HIGGINSON

The following estimate of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, written before her death and printed in the Outlook, is from the pen of Thomas Wentworth Higginson, dean of New England's men of letters.

By THOMAS W. HIGGINSON.

Many years of what may be called intimacy with Mrs. Julia Ward Howe do not help one's power of painting her as she is, and this for two reasons: first, because she does not care to be portrayed in any other way, and, secondly, because her freedom of temperament is so inexhaustible as to fix one's attention always on what she said or did.

After knowing her more than forty years, and having been fellow member or officer in half a dozen clubs with her, first and last, during that time, I now see in her, not merely the woman of to-day, but the woman who went through the education of wifehood and motherhood, of reformer and agitator, and in all these was educated by the experience of life.

She lived to refute much early criticism or hasty judgment, and this partly from inward growth, partly because the society in which she moved was growing for itself and understood her better. The wife of a reformer is apt to be tested by the obstacles her husband encounters; if she is sympathetic she shares his difficulties, and if not, is perhaps criticised by the very same people for not sharing his zeal.

Distrust of New Yorkers.

Mrs. Howe, moreover, came to Boston at a time when all New Yorkers were there regarded with a slight distrust; she bore and reared five children, and doubtless, like all good mothers, had methods of her own. She went into company, and was criticised in cliques which did not applaud. Whatever she did, she might be in many eyes the object of prejudice. Beyond all, there was, I suspect, a slight uncertainty in her own mind that was reflected in her early poems.

From the moment when she came forward in the Woman Suffrage Movement, however, there was a visible change; it gave a new brightness to her face, a new cordiality in her manner, made her calmer, firmer; she found herself among new friends and could disregard old critics. Nothing can be more frank and characteristic than her own narrative of her first almost accidental participation in a woman's suffrage meeting. She had strayed into the hall, still not half convinced, and was rather reluctantly persuaded to take a seat on the platform, although some of her best friends were there—Garrison, Phillips, and James Freeman Clarke, her pastor. But there was also Lucy Stone, who had long been the object of imaginary disapproval; and yet Mrs. Howe, like every one else who heard Lucy Stone's sweet voice for the first time, was charmed and half won by it.

I remember the same experience at a New York meeting in the case of Helen Hunt, who went to such a meeting on purpose to write a satirical letter about it for the New York Tribune, but said to me, as we came out together, "Do you suppose I could ever write a word against anything which that woman wishes to have done?" Such was the influence of that first meeting on Mrs. Howe. "When they requested me to speak," she says, "I could only say, I am with you. I have been with them ever since, and have never seen any reason to go back from the pledge then given."

Ignorant of Debate Rules.

She adds that she had everything to learn with respect to public speaking, the rules of debate and the management of her voice, she having hitherto spoken in parlors only. In the same way she was gradually led into the wider sphere of woman's congresses, and at last into the presidency of the woman's department at the great World's Fair at New Orleans in the Winter of 1883-4, at which she presided with great ability, organizing a series of short talks on the exhibits, to be given by experts.

While in charge of this she held a special meeting in the colored people's department, where the "Battle Hymn" was sung, and she spoke to them of Garrison, Sumner and Dr. Howe. Her daughter's collection of books written by women was presented to the Ladies' Art Association of New Orleans, and her whole enterprise was a singular triumph. In dealing with public enterprises in all parts of the country she soon made herself welcome everywhere. And yet this was the very woman who had written in the "Salutatory" of her first volume of poems:

"I was born 'neath a clouded star,
More in shadow than light have grown;
Loving souls are not like trees
That strongest and stateliest shoot alone."

The truth is that the life of a reformer always affords some training; either giving it self-control or marring it altogether—more frequently the former; it was at any rate eminently so with her. It could be truly said, in her case, that to have taken up reform was a liberal education.

Summers at Newport.

I remember well that household of young people in successive Summers at Newport, as they grew towards maturity; how they in turn came back from school and college, each with individual tastes and gifts, full of life, singing, dancing, frolicking, poetizing, and one of them at least, with a talent for cookery which delighted all Newport; then their wooing and marriages, always happy; their lives always busy; their temperaments so varied. These are the influences under which "wild erratic natures" grow calm.

A fine training was also, for these children themselves, to see their mother one of the few who could unite all kinds of friendship in the same life. Having herself the entree of whatever the fashion of Newport could in those days afford, entertaining brilliant or showy guests from New York, Washington, London or Paris; her doors were equally open at the same time to the plainest or most modest reformer—abolitionist, woman suffragist, or Quaker; and this as a matter of course, without struggle.

I have never encountered, at home or abroad, a group of people so cultivated and agreeable as existed for a few years in Newport in the Summers. There were present, as intellectual and social forces, not merely the Howes, but such families as the Bancrofts, the Warings, the Partons, the Potters, the Woolseys, the Hunts, the Rogers, the Hartes, the Hollands, the Goodwins, the Fields, and others besides, who were readily brought together for any intellectual enjoyment. No one was the recognized leader, though Mrs. Howe came nearest to it; but they met as cheery companions, nearly all of whom have passed away.

Mrs. Howe Club President.

It was in the midst of this circle that the "Town and Country Club" was formed, of which Mrs. Howe was president, and I had the humbler functions of vice-president, and it was under its auspices that the "Commencement" took place at the always attractive house of the late Mr. and Mrs. John W. Bigelow of New York. It was modeled after the Harvard commencement exercises, and its Latin program, prepared by Professor Lane, then one of the highest classical authorities in New England, gave a list of speakers and subjects, the latter almost all drawn from Mrs. Howe's ready wit.

I remember how I, myself, distrusted this particular project, which was wholly hers. When she began to plan out the "parts" in advance—the Rev. Mr. Brooks, the foremost of German translators, with his Teutonic themes; the agricultural Waring, with his potatoes; Harte on Pacific women; Parton with his New York aldermen, and I, myself, with two recent papers mingled in one—I ventured to remonstrate.

"They will not write these Commencement orations," I said. "Then I will write them," responded Mrs. Howe, firmly.

"They will not deliver them," I said. "Then I will deliver them," she replied and so, in some cases, she practically did.

She and I presided, dividing between us the two parts of Professor Goodwin's Oxford gown for our official adornment, to enforce the dignity of the occasion, and Societas Urbanoruralis, or Town and Country Club, proved equal to the occasion.

An essay on "Philosophy" was given by "Fanny Fern" (Mrs. Parton), which was illustrated on the blackboard by this equation, written slowly by Mrs. Howe and read impressively:

Nose + nose + nose = proboscis.
Nose − nose − nose = snub.

She also sang a song occasionally, and once called up a class for recitations from Mother Goose in six different languages, Professor Goodwin beginning with a Greek version of "The Man in the Moon" and another Harvard man (now Dr. Gorham Bacon) following up with:

Heu! Heu! diddlum
Felis cum fidulum
Vacca transiluit lunam
Caniculus ridet
Quum talem videt
Et dish ambulavit cum spoonam.

The question being asked by Mrs. Howe whether this last line was in strict accordance with grammar, the scholar gave the following rule: "The conditions of grammar should always give way to exigencies of rhyme." In conclusion, two young girls, Annie Bigelow and Mariana Mott, were called forward to receive graduate degrees for law and medicine; the former's announcement coming in this simple form: "Annie Bigelow, my little lamb,

MESSAGES FROM ALL OVER WORLD HONOR MEMORY OF FAMOUS WOMAN.

I welcome you to a long career at the bar."

Fond of a Joke.

That time is long past, but "The Hurdy-Gurdy," or any one of the later children's books by Mrs. Howe's daughter, Mrs. Laura Richards, will give a glimpse at the endless treasury of daring fun which the second generation of that family inherited from their mother in her prime; which last gift, indeed, has lasted pretty well to the present day. It was, we must remember, never absolutely out of taste; but it must be owned that she would fearlessly venture on half a dozen poor jokes for one good one. Such a risk she feared not to take at any moment, beyond any woman I ever knew. Nature gave her a spiritual youth, and what is youth if it be not fearless?

In her earlier Newport period she was always kind and hospitable, sometimes dreamy and forgetful, not always tactful. Bright things always came readily to her lips, and a second thought sometimes came too late to withhold a bit of sting. When she said to an artist who had at one time painted numerous portraits of one large and well-known family, "Mr. ——, given age and sex, could you create a Cabot?" it gave no cause for just complaint, because the family likeness was so pervasive that he would have grossly departed from nature had he left it out.

Mrs. Howe was one of the earliest contributors to the Atlantic Monthly. Her poem, "Hamlet at the Boston," appeared in the second year of the magazine, in February, 1859, and her "Trip to Cuba," appeared in six successive numbers in that and the following volume. Her poem "The Last Bird," also appeared in one of these volumes, after which there was an interval of two and a half years during which her contributions were suspended. Several more of her poems came out in Volume VII (1861), and the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" in the number for February, 1862 (IX., 145).

Lyrics of the Street.

During the next two years there appeared six numbers of a striking series called "Lyrics of the Street." Most of these poems, with others, were included in a volume called "Later Lyrics" (1865). She had previously, however, in 1853, published her first volume of poems, entitled "Passion Flowers"; and these volumes were at a later period condensed into one by her daughters, with some omissions—not always quite felicitous, as I think—this definitive volume bearing the name "From Sunset Ridge" (1898).

Mrs. Howe, like her friend Dr. Holmes, has perhaps had the disappointing experience of concentrating her sure prospects of fame on a single poem. What the "Chambered Nautilus" represents in his published volumes, the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" represents for her. In each case the poet was happy enough to secure, through influence impenetrable, one golden moment. Even this poem in Mrs. Howe's case was not (although many suppose otherwise) a song sung by the soldiers.

The resounding lyric of "John Brown's Body" reached them much more readily, but the "Battle Hymn" will doubtless survive all the rest of the rather disappointing metrical products of the war. For the rest of her poems, they are rarely quite enough concentrated; they reach ears attractively but not with positive mastery.

ANECDOTES FROM MRS. HOWE'S LIFE

In her eighty-fifth year Mrs. Howe was asked: "What is the ideal aim of life."

After brief thought the venerable leader responded: "To learn, to teach, to serve and to enjoy."

On September 27, 1909, Mrs. Howe was one of the distinguished guests at the official reception given in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, by the officials of the famous Hudson-Fulton celebration. Her part of the reception programme consisted in reading her own poem, written specially for the celebration. It was entitled "Fulton," and was as follows:

A river flashing like a gem,
Crowned with a mountain diadem,
Invites an unaccustomed guest
To launch his shallop on her crest;
A pilgrim whose exploring mind
Must leave his tardy pace behind;
"My bark creeps slow, the world is vast,
How shall its space be overpassed?"

Responsive to his cry appears
A visionary, young in years,
Commissioned with prophetic brain
The mystic problem to explain;
"Where fire and water closest blend,
There find a servant and a friend."

Yet many a moon must wax and wane,
With sleepless nights and days of pain,
Pleading a monarch's court before
Shrewd processes and study sore,
Ere on the silver tide shall float,
Swifter than thought, young Fulton's boat.

And not alone for Hudson's stream
Avails the magic power of steam;
Blessings of unimagined worth
Its speed shall carry round the earth;
Knowledge shall on its pinions fly,
Nor land nor race in darkness lie;
Commerce her hoards shall freely bring
To many an urgent summoning,
And Want and Wealth, in sundered lands,
Shall closely clasp reconciling hands,
While master minds new Gospels span,
The holy brotherhood of man.

Rest, Fulton, in thine honored grave,
Remembered with the wise and brave;
Thy message visits every sea,
Herald of benefits to be.
So nearly may our world relate
The mighty movements of her fate,
So Doom and Dangers wide apart
Appeal to every human heart.

And, as one sun doth compass all
That shall arise or may befall,
One fiat on creation's night
Bestowed the blessed boon of light,
So shall all life one promise fill
For Freedom, Justice and Good Will.

Her Plea for the Babies.

One of the last public appearances of Mrs. Howe was on May 24, last, when she came to the State House to plead before the Legislative Committee which was investigating the milk problem. She lacked three days of being ninety-one years old. She was accorded the utmost deference by the legislators. When she came forward to testify, House Chairman Warren begged her to be seated, but Mrs. Howe preferred to stand while addressing the committee. She said in part:

> There is no possible substitute for good milk in the rearing of small children. The most prominent party to be considered in this question is the little child in the cradle, who has to depend upon good and pure milk for his existence.
>
> We want this matter settled in the cause of justice and mercy. I do not think it should take us so very long to come to a just decision, so that the children may not suffer in the quarrel between men.

BROKEN

Despair Breaks Down the Spirit, but Dr. Greene's Nervura Restores Vigor and Happiness.

Men who are weak lose heart. They see no hope for the future. After spending large sums for treatment which does not cure they are in despair, and settle down to a life of gloom.

All this is unnecessary because there is sure assistance and cure for all such men in Dr. Greene's Nervura, the wonderful vegetable medicine which has become famous all over the world.

Mr. Alfred M. Bergin, 206 West 41st St., New York City, says:

"I was afflicted with extreme nervousness and neurasthenia, which threatened to lead to insanity. I was despondent and continually had forebodings of something awful hanging over me. I wanted to be alone, and I would sit and brood over imaginary troubles for hours. I was very thin and pale, and terribly nervous. I doctored for my trouble, and got no relief. The doctors did not seem to help me.

"Finally I was recommended to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and I am thankful to announce that this great medicine helped me wonderfully. It is really a nerve remedy, as its name says. My nerves that were all shattered are now perfectly strong, and the difference in me is marvelous. My imaginary troubles are all gone, for Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy gave me new nerves and has strengthened my body, too. I sleep and eat well. I am getting stout. I have lost that fear of losing my mind, and I am thankful to say that I feel like a new being."

Dr. Greene's Nervura is nature's grand remedy for vital decay. Remember you can always consult Dr. Greene free by call or letter at 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass.

Why Is It

(a question often asked)

that the smooth mellow flavor of Pabst Blue Ribbon is duplicated in no other beer? It is simply the result of "knowing how."

No two housewives will bake bread that is exactly alike, even using the same materials. One bakes better than another because of her peculiar "knack" or "know how."

WHOLE FLORIDA COAST IN GRASP OF TERRIFIC DEATH-DEALING STORM

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Oct. 18.—The worst storm in sixteen years is sweeping the ocean in a tidal wave over the sea wall and on to the Fort Marion reservation. The entire business section is inundated and the wind was still rising at 9 a. m. Trees are being blown down in the streets, houses unroofed and porches torn down. Street car traffic is tied up and some cars are deep in water.

It is not believed that trains will be able to reach the city. All wires are down to the south and it is impossible to estimate the number of dead, which will mount up to the hundreds. The last news said that the storm was raging with fearful velocity on the lower coast. Special fear is felt for Tampa and Key West, which are entirely cut off from the world.

The latest report out of Key West stated that that city was being swept by one of the worst storms ever experienced along that section of the Gulf coast. In this city the wind dashed immense waves over the sea wall. Ships were broken from their moorings, and it is believed that many fishing craft which had been unable to make port because of the wind foundered with losses of life.

Railroads Washed Away.

Three laborers were reported killed along the East Coast Railrod, which is in the path of the storm. Miles of trackage have been washed away. The loss will go into millions of dollars.

It is impossible to estimate nor can the exact loss of life be known, on account of the vagueness of the reports. Telegraph and telephone wires were blown down, making communication impossible. Refugees from sections of the stricken zone report fearful damages.

A dozen towns and villages have been wiped out, among them the prosperous communities of Martinas, Guane, LaGrifa, Punta, Cartes, Artemisa and Cortes. In Pina del Rio many villages were destroyed and all the crops ruined.

A square mile of the residential section of the city of Havana is now submerged. The residents were obliged to flee for their lives. Other persons living nearby are leaving their homes, as it is feared the foundations of adjoining houses have been undermined by the water. In Havana alone the damage already exceeds more than a million dollars, due mainly to the destruction of the custom house sheds, filled with perishable goods, and the sinking of scores of lighters, many containing valuable cargoes which had been unloaded from steamers in the harbor. Immense waves broke over the Malecon sea wall with tremendous violence and also flooded a great portion of the suburb Vedado.

Long Death Roll Feared.

Three men were drowned in Havana harbor, and reports indicate that the casualty list from the interior will be large.

The entire island is in a state of panic. J. Linn Rogers, the American Consul General, succeeded in reaching Artemisa, thirty-five miles southwest of Havana, and upon his return reported that the country has been devastated by floods. Conditions from Artemisa to Cape San Antonio are said to be even worse. All the tobacco seed beds and barns have been destroyed, and the prospective crop will not exceed ten per cent. of normal. The sugar crop did not suffer so much but great damage has been done to standing cane.

The report that Havana had been struck by a tidal wave increased the fears of the people, but were allayed somewhat when the wind changed and the seas abated.

The upper part of the Prado was filled with throngs of panic-stricken negroes, carrying such household effects as they could rescue from their own homes.

Prisoners in Panic.

The jail, at the foot of the Prado, was completely surrounded by water, and the prisoners, made with fear, clung to the barred windows, clamorously demanding to be removed to a place of safety. It was feared for a time that the prisoners would break loose, but armed guards held them in check with rifles until the waters began to recide.

TRY ARC-LIGHT RAY WHEN YOUR HAIR FADES AWAY

It's "Rah!" to-day for the arc-light ray,
Which gleams in the stilly night.
I let it shine on that head of mine,
My noodle so bald and white.
The minutes go. Yes—I feel it grow.
The roof-thatch which once was there,
I hie away at the break of day,
Equipped with some new-born hair.
The arc-light ray now illumes the way
For legions of bald despair,
And aged boys can renew their joys,
Their self-respect and their hair.
The currents go from the dynamo
To space where the hair is not,
And hair is made long enough to braid
By grace of the kilo-watt.
—(Bald Ballads.)

Remember the Biblical party at whom the naughty Biblical children hooted: "Go up, thou Baldhead." And the bears came out and "et 'em up?"

If those had been Boston-1910 children they would have yelled: "Go up, thou Baldhead—to Boston Common and sit under the arc-light."

And the bald one would have let the arc-light shine on his polished dome of thought and thereby caused hair to grow where hair grew before, maybe.

Yes, there is hope for the shining noddle. There is hope for even such as Fred J. MacLeod, the much-sought chairman of the Democratic State Committee, also chairman of the Committee of Four. There is the same brand of hope, too, for Congressman "Sam" McCall, whose baldness is averred to be of the same baldy baldiness as that of Chairman MacLeod.

For the arc-light rays are said to work success now, even on such acute cases where it is "Too late for——," as we read in the barber ads.

The arc-light theory for the desolated dome of thought was discovered by an elderly gentleman of a bald head and persevering turn of mind. He was noticed sitting bareheaded in Boston Common night after night. The powerful rays of an arc-light played like a searchlight upon his egg-like head. On the fifth night of this performance he was asked why he sat thus. He said:

"I have heard that arc-light rays cure baldness. I have tried about everything else. I have applied ointments, unguents, oils, balms, salves, poultices, chemicals and phosphates. I have tried all the known treatments from divorce to mud baths. I have walked barefooted in the grass at early dawn and never grew anything more emphatic than a cold in the head. I have dieted and fed to excess. I have tried massage of the scalp and having my head ironed. I have worn camel's hair shawls on my head as a forlorn hope. I have stayed on the water-wagon and then fallen off and gone the speed limit. I have rubbed a rabbit's foot on my head on the left-hand shore of Winthrop Beach on the night before election. I have used recipes that had the 'Wool of bat and tongue of dog' game beaten to a frazzle. My head stayed as barren as the sun-baked rocks of my Old New Hampshire Home. I heard of this arc-light gag. There may be nothing to it. But there's nothing like trying. And I won't get any balder."

A whole census of bald-headed Bostonians are awaiting with fierce anxiety the results of the arc-light treatment.

The Arc Light Bath

JUDGE MAKES RULING ON THE LE BLANC CASE

The question of whether Hattie LeBlanc, the seventeen year old domestic now awaiting trial charged with the murder of Clarence F. Glover in Waltham, shall be a witness at the hearing on the contest over the Glover will, is to be fully gone into by the court on December 13th. This statement was made to-day at a conference of attorneys in the case before Judge James M. Morton at East Cambridge.

The conference was held for the purpose of setting a date for the hearing. John J. Scott, attorney for the Glover brothers, asked for a continuance on the ground that Jesse Gove, attorney for William Glover, was sick. Judge Morton granted the continuance, setting December 13th as the date of the hearing. In setting the date Judge Morton said:

"The question of a further continuance from the date I have now set rests upon the desire of the Glover brothers to have Hattie Le Blanc as a witness at the hearing. This question will be fully gone into at that time."

To-day's conference was held just after the conference on the Russell will case. Samuel D. Elmore, Alton F. Tupper and Irving N. Linnell appeared for the Glover will. John J. Scott was the sole lawyer for the contestants.

Mr. Elmore opposed a continuance of the case because as he argued the interests of the estate were paramount. "I appreciate that Mr. Gove is very ill and has been operated upon twice," said Mr. Elmore, "notwithstanding that I feel that I must ask for an immediate trial of this case. The contestants were unable to establish anything like a case in the lower court and the estate should not be tied up in endless litigation."

Judge Morton granted the continuance, but decided that William Glover, one of the contesting brothers, must be represented by counsel at that time, whether Mr. Gove were well enough to attend or not.

MAYOR OFFERS LUCIUS TUTTLE TWO CITY JOBS

Lucius M. Tuttle, former president of the Boston & Maine Railroad, was tentatively offered the position of health commissioner for the city of Boston by Mayor Fitzgerald to-day.

Ex-President Tuttle has not as yet accepted or declined the position. He told the Mayor that he felt his long service in business life entitled him to a rest, and that he would not consider any business proposition for some time to come. He promised to visit the Mayor shortly and confer with him at length upon the subject.

Mayor Fitzgerald also endeavored to have the former railroad official accept a position as head of a commission which he proposes to appoint to revise the building laws of the city of Boston. He was also non-committal on the matter of the acceptance of this berth.

"I believe that Mr. Tuttle's broad experience and great ability particularly fit him for splendid work in the public service," said Mayor Fitzgerald, in discussing the matter. "I propose wherever possible to get the biggest men in the community to take an active interest in public affairs, and where they have time to give to the public service it will always be readily welcomed while I am Mayor."

The Mayor said further that he proposed to appoint a commission of at least five men of experience and knowledge of the building conditions in the city to revise the building laws for the purpose of safeguarding it further against fire losses. He has offered Mr. Tuttle the appointment as head of this commission, and he proposes to have them begin work at once so that they can report to the next Legislature.

TRIPLE WOES OF AN AUTO OWNER

Ernest S. Holton, a Lexington contractor, was before Judge Almy in the Cambridge District Court to-day charged with recklessly operating his machine, operating without a license and drunkenness. On the charge of reckless driving he was fined $100 and appealed. On the charge of operating without a license he was fined $20 and paid. The charge of drunkenness was placed on file.

HOW TO SUCCEED

Depends Entirely on Superior Merit and Knowledge.

During the last few years conditions in all lines of business, even professional life, have changed so completely that every man is waking up to the fact that in order to win success he must specialize and learn to do some one thing and do it well.

So it is with any article that is sold to the people. It must have genuine merit or no amount of advertising will maintain the demand for the article.

For many years we have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy. From the very beginning the proprietors had so much confidence in it that they invited every one to test it, free of cost, before purchasing.

It is a physician's prescription.

They have on file thousands of letters received from former sufferers who are now enjoying good health as a result of its use.

However, if you wish first to try a sample bottle, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper. They will gladly forward you a sample bottle by mail, absolutely free.

Sold at druggists' in bottles of two sizes—fifty-cents and one-dollar.

This is not the first time that William M. McDonald has decided to be an independent candidate for sheriff of Suffolk County. He filed independent nomination papers several years ago but dropped out of the fight before he got enough signatures to insure his going upon the ballot. The wise ones are saying he will repeat the performance this year.

* * *

Councilman Jim Curley has sent out a circular to the South Boston voters of the Tenth District explaining how it was that he happened to use offensive language on the night before the caucus at a number of South Boston rallies. He says that there was a small band of rowdies organized to break up his rallies and that his uncomplimentary remarks were addressed to them particularly and not to the South Boston voters.

* * *

Alonzo D. Moran has filed already about 1,000 signatures or nearly enough to secure his name going upon the ballot as an independent candidate for District Attorney. Friday is the farewell day for independent papers in the local fights.

Henry Dixon, campaign manager for James A. McElaney, Jr., a Democratic candidate for the House in Ward 20, announces after a postal card poll of the Democratic voters in the ward that 71 per cent. of 4,500 registered Democrats in the ward have promised to come out on election day and give McElaney a vote. With a little support from the Republicans McElaney expects to win.

Mayor Fitzgerald thinks that Congressman Keleher will be licked badly if he becomes an independent candidate for Congress in the Ninth District. He says so with a conviction that leads people to believe he will take a very prominent part in the fight himself for William F. Murray.

* * *

John L. Donovan of Ward 7, foe of the Chinamen, will be an independent candidate for the House from Ward 7. He believes that the money of the Chinamen was responsible for his defeat at the caucus and he proposes to find out if the verdict was the real wish of all the voters of Ward 7 by running on election day.

* * *

James J. Moynihan, barrister, of Ward 13 is another candidate for the House, unsuccessful on primary day, who will try again at the State election. Ward 13 has the reputation of not caring much for independent candidacies but Moynihan is not disheartened. He was licked in the caucus by a few votes.

How to Cure Dandruff

Dandruff can be cured by simply washing the hair and scalp with a shampoo composed of Refined Soap, Cochin Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. This removes all traces of scales or dandruff and makes the hair take on new life. If you have been using common soap, try Birt's Head Wash, which is made of the above ingredients, and e the difference. Ordinary soaps d shampoos contain an excess of ali, which is bad for the scalp. t's Head Wash is sold at all drug d department stores at 25c and 50c.

At Challenge Prices
CHALLENGE SALE CONTINUES ALL THIS WEEK

This is the biggest Challenge Sale we ever had. Monday exceeded our expectations. Fifteen minutes before the store opened the crowds began to collect on the sidewalks. One of the largest crowds that ever waited for the opening of a sale was on hand when the doors opened, eagerly awaiting the opportunity to supply their Fall and Winter needs with better styles, qualities and values than other stores offer with their limited buying facilities. The Siegel Purchasing Power is unlimited and stands back of every value we offer. We challenge our competitors to meet our prices, and with America's largest buying organization—Boston, New York (two stores) and Chicago—it is obvious that our values will not be equalled elsewhere.

WILLIAM R. HEARST'S SPEECH AT BIG LEAGUE RATIFICATION

Says He is In Politics to Fight Corrupt Old Party Machines.

To Combat Black Horse Cavalry of Republicans and Black Leg Infantry of Democrats.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—William Randolph Hearst at the Independence League notification and ratification meeting last night in Cooper Union in Clermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn, spoke as follows:

My Friends: I have been told, and you have been told that I lost control of the Independence Party State Convention and that I am somehow dissatisfied with the action of that convention.

I want to begin my campaign by saying first that I heartily and enthusiastically approve of every word and act of that convention and second, that I was a delegate to that convention and not the boss of it.

To have lost control of the convention I must either have had control of it or have tried to control it, or at least have wanted to have control of it.

Not one of these things did I do, nor has there ever been an Independence party convention that I have controlled or tried to control or wanted to control.

There has never been an Independence party convention where there has not been absolute freedom of discussion and of action and if the time ever comes when anybody controls an Independence party convention that will be the time for you and me as friends to get out of the Independence party and start a new party.

To Fight Old Parties.

I am not in politics to control conventions but to fight the corrupt machines of the old parties, that do control conventions.

I am not in politics to try to make you do what I want done, but myself to try to do what you want done.

The Independence party calls its conventions to learn the will of the people. It frames its platform and names its candidates to express the will of the people and it goes into campaigns and fights for its principles with the single purpose of carrying out the will of the people. I believe in the mighty wisdom of the majority. I believe that the marvelous success of our great nation is due to our form of government.

I believe that the great danger and the only real danger to our institutions lies in a traitorous attempt of the criminal trusts and the corrupt bosses to supersede the popular will and to deny to the citizens their rightful control of their own government.

I am not opposed to the great trust magnates for any personal reason.

I admire their great ability and approve of many of their private benevolences.

I am not opposed to the political bosses for any personal reasons. They may be harmless enough in any private capacity.

No Personal Prejudice.

But I am opposed to the criminal combination between the trust magnates and these political bosses to conduct the government corruptly in their own selfish interests. I am opposed to these trust magnates and these political bosses in their corrupt public capacities and I will not have a private friend who is a public enemy. I am not opposed to the Republican party through any personal prejudice. I would joyfully join a Republican party led by a Lincoln, but I cannot get aboard any Republican band wagon drawn by Root and Roosevelt trotting contentedly in double harness.

I will not be dragged anywhere on any road, in any political chariot, drawn by Root and Roosevelt as leaders, and Woodruff and Aldrich as wheelers.

Some months ago Mr. Roosevelt declared that he was going to drive the bosses out of the Republican party in the State of New York. Then he went to Colorado to do it.

After a couple of weeks waiting I wrote an article telling Mr. Roosevelt that if he was sincere in his fight against the bosses he should come home to New York and attend to that important business. The time was getting short.

Mr. Roosevelt read an extract from that article and said that he was going home to fight the bosses. But he did not go. He lingered love-feasting in Illinois, listening to the lulling music of the cheers.

Roosevelt Wasted Time.

He wasted precious time peacocking in Pennsylvania before his admiring friends. He arrived in his own State only two days before the primaries, yet much could have been done in two days. Many a great battle has been won in the eleventh hour.

But when the reporters gathered about Mr. Roosevelt, ready to catch the clarion call which would summon his followers to a victorious charge against the bosses, Mr. Roosevelt declared that he could not say anything until he had "brushed the dust off his clothes."

Mind you, only two days left in which to defeat the bosses at the primaries, and Mr. Roosevelt spent those two days brushing the dust off his clothes.

Would history have immortalized Blucher, if, on arriving at Waterloo late in the day, he had sent word to Wellington that he could not help him until he had "brushed the dust off his clothes."

Would the stirring poem, "Sheridan, Twenty Miles Away," ever have been written if Sheridan, when he arrived on the battlefield, had refused to rally his retiring soldiers until he had "brushed the dust off his clothes." While Mr. Roosevelt was brushing the dust off his clothes and into the people's eyes, Woodruff won in King's and Aldridge won in Rochester. The boss hunt turned out to be a paper chase after all with Root and Roosevelt first at the finish, with Aldridge and Woodruff riding hard at their heels and with Hendrick's men, Shoeneck, chosen master of the legislative hounds.

Mr. Roosevelt won his personal point, but he won no victory for the people. He wrested the control of his party in this State from the hands of his enemy Boss Barnes and reposed it in the hands of his personal friend, Boss Root.

No Democrats to Vote on.

Finally, I have no personal prejudice against the Democratic party. I was brought up a Democrat and I might even vote for the Democratic ticket in this campaign if I could find any Democrats on the ticket to vote for. Mr. Dix bolted the Democratic State ticket in 1896 and 1900. Mr. Conway bolted the Democratic State ticket in 1902. Both Mr. Dix and Mr. Conway bolted Democratic presidential tickets whenever the tickets were radical. Mr. Goldfogle, Mr. Riordan, Mr. Barton, Mr. Harrison, Mr. Fitzgerald, Mr. Conry, Mr. Goulden, Mr. Willet and Mr. Fornes voted in Congress for reactionary Republicanism and supported Cannon and the Cannon gag rules.

I cannot see, therefore, what claim this reactionary Democratic ticket has upon the loyalty of progressive Democratic voters. If I were a Democratic voter I would rather vote for a genuine Democrat who calls himself an Independence Leaguer than for a hibrid Republican who calls himself a Democrat.

A party name means nothing and even the significance of a platform depends upon the sincerity of the candidates.

Of what significance is the declaration of the Democratic party in favor of a lower tariff when the candidate and campaign manager of the party have indecently lobbied to secure a higher tariff?

Of what significance is denunciation by the Democratic party of the high cost of living, when the candidate and campaign manager of the Democratic party have done their utmost to increase the cost of living?

Of what significance are the labor planks in the Democratic platform when the Democratic candidates and campaign managers conduct their private business on a non-union basis?

Of what possible authority is the claim that the Democratic party would be opposed to the trusts when the candidate of the Democratic party and the campaign manager of the Democratic party have made their fortunes out of one trust, and are supported in their political activity by every trust upon the criminal calendar?

Of what possible authority is the claim that the Democratic party would be in favor of direct primaries and opposed to boss rule when the Democratic convention was merely a directorate of bosses in a private room taking orders from the trust and transmitting them to the Murphy marionettes assembled in a public hall.

The honorable ridiculous Dix quite recently remarked that if he were elected he would slap the Republican black horse cavalry on the wrist and drive them out of Albany.

There are other more "ifs" in this proposition than the innocent Mr. Dix imagines.

In the first place he is not going to be elected.

In the second place, if he could be elected, Mr. Murphy would not let him meddle for a minute with the crack regiment of the machine marauding army.

Why, the Grady guerillas are the life guards of Tammany Hall.

They belong to the commissary department and they forage for the organization. Imagine Mr. Murphy allowing his paper candidate to interfere with Tammany's rations.

Somebody ought to warn Corporal Dix that if he talks in that way General Murphy will have him court-martialled, and Sergeant Grady will strip the epaulettes from his shoulders and reduce him to the ranks.

If Dix Should Win.

Third, if Mr. Dix should be elected and if he should want to interfere with the black horse cavalry, and if Mr. Murphy should lose his mind and let him, Mr. Dix could no more restrain the black horse cavalry than Mr. Hughes could.

The Lieutenant-Governor is the presiding officer of the Senate; the Lieutenant-Governor overlooks the field in which the black horse cavalry manoeuvres.

Now, my friends, I am a candidate for lieutenant-governor and I am not on this ticket purely as an ornament. I will make it my particular business to drive out the Republican black horse cavalry and also the Democratic black leg infantry.

Regardless of party, the Independence League will train upon these band of brigands the heavy artillery of publicity.

We will fight the black horse cavalry of the Republican party; we will fight the black leg infantry of the Democratic party; we will fight the mercenary black guards of the lobby until they, one and all, haul down the black flag of the criminal trusts.

I indorse every line of the Independence League platform. It repeats its principles by which we have steadfastly stood for many hard fought campaigns. It outlasts the policies by which the citizens can and will wrest the control of their government from the strangling hold of criminal trusts and the greedy grip of corrupt bosses.

I endorse every candidate upon the State ticket, even including the Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Hopper's exceptional ability and patriotic qualities are well known to the citizens of this State. A writer in the New York press says Mr. Hopper is too good a man to be elected Governor and that he should stay here in New York and build our subways.

I say there is no man too good, no man too important to devote his abilities to the public service at this critical time.

My friends we have given you a platform of honest principles. We have given you a ticket of honest candidates. We have done our duty. It is your duty to elect the best men to office and regardless of party. It is your duty to desert the old parties which have long since deserted you.

GILCHRIST'S ENLARGEMENT AIDS SHOPPERS

Since the progress of a city is demonstrated by the development of its industries and shops, the recent enlargement of the Gilchrist Company's department store is a matter of interest to the community and especially to the women shoppers of Greater Boston and New England. The enlargement of the floor space, store departments and the increase in the serving people is due to the remarkable growth of the business of the establishment.

The new portion of the store is to be called the Hamilton place annex. This building, formerly used as a storeroom, has been taken over by the enterprising firm and turned into a store of extraordinary values.

Celebrating the enlargement of the store, the firm is conducting a mammoth expansion sale and offering special inducements to customers.

The features of special interest to shoppers are the additional entrances provided for the new portions of the store and these also connect with all the older departments. One of these is through Hamilton place, directly across from Park Street Church, which makes the store easy of access from Park street, Scollay square and Tremont street, thus making a thoroughfare to avoid the crowds on Winter street. The other entrance leads directly to the centre of Winter street through Music Hall place.

The new department has on its second floor an enlargement of the misses', infants' and boys' clothing section and new and attractive lines have been added to make the enlarged department more enticing to shoppers.

Doubles Rug Stock.

On the third floor are the new lines of shirt waists and muslin underwear, just this portion of the store being as large as many specialty stores. It is well arranged and admirably lighted.

On the fourth floor are the carpets, rugs and linoleums. The additional floor space is so large that the firm has been able to more than double its stock of rugs, thus offering a great assortment and variety to select from. Curtains, portieres and dainty materials are also shown in great assortment.

In the Hamilton place annex directly off Hamilton place and Winter is the shoe department, conveniently located and unusually well stocked. Here also are the hamburgs, the art embroideries and fancy work supplies and dress trimmings. To accommodate customers a splendid additional soda fountain has been installed just at the entrance of this annex.

The basement has also been enlarged and the lines of domestics and lines are now lavishly displayed. Quantities of cottons, towels, bed linen and flannels are included.

These new additions add more than 30,000 square feet of selling space, thus affording greater comfort in shopping, greatly enlarged stocks throughout the entire store, as the new portions will lessen the congestion in the original store and better store service than ever. The number of salespeople has been increased over a third of the previous number.

Store of Big Values.

The management justly claims now one of the largest and best equipped stores in New England and assures not only splendid values but also unlimited quantities of merchandise of the highest quality and of standard worth.

A new finely lighted room is to be devoted to the embroidery classes which the firm provides for all customers who buy their supplies in the Gilchrist art embroidery department. A competent teacher will conduct these classes and give individual instruction. Customers may enter the classes at any time free of charge.

In spite of the great enlargement the store has undergone, the crowds which have thronged all departments so far this week, have taxed the accommodations to their utmost capacity.

BRANDEIS WARS WITH NEW HAVEN ON DEMURRAGE

Attorney Louis D. Brandeis, appearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission for the New England shippers protesting against the reduction of "demurrage" time allowed for unloading freight cars from ninety-six to forty-eight hours, to-day charged that shippers were afraid to testify at the hearing because of what the railroads would do to them. The New Haven road was under discussion at the time the charge was made. Solicitor Robbins of the New Haven jumped excitedly to his feet and declared there wasn't a word of truth in the statement.

The hearing was held to-day in the reading room of the Chamber of Commerce. About two hundred shippers were present. Arthur Hale, son of Edward Everett Hale and general agent of the American Railways Association, was a witness when the clash between Lawyer Brandeis and Robbins occurred.

Agent Hale gave detailed information of the railroad's viewpoint in the controversy. He drew Lawyer Brandeis's fire in his direction after he had declared that railroads outside of New England were chary of sending cars into this territory because of the delay in getting them back.

Sent Cars on Agreement.

Mr. Hale told of his former connection with the Baltimore & Ohio, and said that his road would only send coal cars into New England when it had an agreement with the New Haven to send a proportionate number of its own cars back to them. Mr. Hale eulogized his former employers and told how fair the B. & O. had been with its shippers when it had frequently repaid alleged demurrage charges.

It was at this point that he drew the fire of questions from Mr. Brandeis that followed. Attorney Brandeis first drew from him the admission that the total delay per car in unloading in New England was much less than it was fifteen years ago. Mr. Brandeis then asked:

Q.—Did you not know that New England shippers have no redress when the construction or interpretation of the demurrage rules rests with the railroads? A.—I know nothing of the kind.

Q.—Do you know who the last resort is in disputed demurrage cases on the New Haven road? A.—I suppose Currier or Higgins.

Q.—Do you believe that because you, on the Baltimore & Ohio, were fair that the other railroads are? A.—No.

Q.—Acting under the rule of refunding money wrongly assessed, do you know what the method of procedure is on the New Haven? A.—I don't know.

Shipper Afraid to Testify.

Mr. Brandeis emphasized the name of the road and his action created laughter in the room. At this point Solicitor Robbins jumped into the fray. In an excited voice he said:

"Which rule?"

Mr. Brandeis replied:

"Under the rule that the New Haven is master of the situation and can do what it wants."

"That is unjust and you have no right to say such a thing," declared Robbins, jumping to his feet excitedly.

TELLS HARVARD TO GET PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT

The old New England isn't here any longer. It's gone. It isn't coming back. The endowment university has got the same reasons for telling people how important it is to them as the University of Wisconsin. The college in the East has got to have a publicity department and a large one, too. I haven't the slightest doubt if we cast aside this ridiculous modesty that Harvard University would increase perhaps a hundred times in size. You are tremendously in debt, one to another, you people of the university and the city, but you keep too dark about it. In my opinion President Lowell is the man to do the job.—The Rev. Edward Cummings to the Cambridge Club.

CHARGES BOGUS DIVORCE RECORD MADE HER BRIDE

What was offered as a "fake" divorce record was the chief piece of evidence used by an attractive young woman giving the name of Miss Josephine G. Richardson of No. 84 Huntington avenue to-day, in the Suffolk Divorce Court, in her effort to have her marriage to Darius L. V. Moffett, formerly an attorney in the Tremont building, now a fugitive from justice, annulled.

Mis Richardson told Judge Pierce that she married Moffett in Jersey City, July 25, 1908, believing him to have been divorced from his first wife. She testified that one year prior to the marriage he had sent her a certifiatce of divorce which on its face showed that he had been divorced for some time.

This certificate was shown to Judge Pierce. It was explained that the certificate had been doctored by the erasure of the original writing in ink by means of acid and the substitution of other names in typewriting; that the divorce certificate was originally that of Louis Cutting against his wife Edith. It was explained that Moffett appeared as attorney for Mr. Cutting when his divorce was obtained.

WATCHMAN HELD FOR SETTING MILL FIRE

Charged with setting fire to the C. H. Hardwick polishing mill at Quincy Sunday night, and then ringing in an alarm so that he could get a position as night watchman at that mill, Louis A. Parks, night watchman at Falton's quarry in that city, waived examination in the Quincy Municipal Court this morning and was held in $1,000 for the grand jury. He is alleged to have confessed. His reason for setting the fire, it is said, lay in the fact that the Hardwick Company had no night watchman, while, he, being employed in that capacity, wanted the position.

LYNN'S AUTO PATROL IS IN SERVICE TO-DAY

LYNN, Oct. 18.—The big auto patrol wagon of the Lynn police department was placed in service for the first time to-day. The Knox car, which cost the city $3,400, made a trip about the city with Mayor James E. Rich and Chief of Police Thomas M. Burckes as passengers. The first prisoners to occupy the closed body of the tonean were Morris Cotter, a vagrant, and Thomas Trainor, convicted of drunkenness, who were taken from court to the Boston & Maine station, en route to the State farm at Bridgewater, in charge of Committing Officer Martin Silver.

WESTBORO REPORTS FINE APPLE CROP

WESTBORO, Oct. 18.—It is estimated that the apple crop raised here this year amounts to 15,000 barels, and practically all of the fruit is first quality. Most farmers in this vicinity had sold their apples to a St. Louis concern, which paid $1.75 a loose barrel. Six hundred barels were shipped to St. Louis yesterday. Henry Fenno, who is in business in Boston and owns the Robinsonia farm, has set out 400 young apple trees.

WAREHAM WILL HAVE NEW TOWN HIGHWAY

WAREHAM, Oct. 18.—The County Commissioners held a hearing at Onset village on a petition to lay out a street through Ramsdell's farm near Shell Point as a town way. Selectman B. A. Geary and Irving Hammond spoke in favor of the layout. There was no opposition, and the commissioners will, no doubt, report favorably.

MISS GAZZAM WEDS SOUL MATE TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Deposing two other soulmates while a magazine of her own financiering is running serially her astral being's inmost story, "My Search for a Masculine Counterpart and Ideal Companion Through the Supernatural," Miss Antoinette Reading Gazzam, the $3,000,000 heiress of Cornwall, N. Y., is married to-day to her sure-enough, certain, positive, undoubted, honest-to-goodness affinity, Charles B. Galvin, an engineer on the New York aqueduct, of no preponderant wealth.

A Badge of Honesty

Is printed on the outer wrapper of every bottle of

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

and it is the only medicine for woman's peculiar ailments, sold by druggists, the makers of which feel fully warranted in thus taking the afflicted into their full confidence.

The more known about the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the more confidently will invalid women rely upon it to cure their peculiar weaknesses and derangements. There's no secrecy about its make-up—no deceptive inducements held out to the afflicted. It's simply a good, honest, square-deal medicine with no alcohol, or injurious, habit-forming drugs in its composition. Made wholly from roots. It can do no harm in any condition of woman's organism.

Devised and put up by a physician of vast experience in the treatment of woman's maladies. Its ingredients have the indorsement of leading physicians in all schools of practice.

The "Favorite Prescription" is known everywhere as the standard remedy for diseases of women and has been so regarded for the past 40 years and more.

Accept no secret nostrum in place of "Favorite Prescription"—a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, with a record of 40 years of cures behind it.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines—sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Favorite Prescription." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of, but you don't and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. It's This Little "Cartridge" That Does the Trick

GENTLEMEN: Hats off to Mr. Baron — the Englishman whose brain unfurled that great idea, the tobacco "cartridge."

For this little "cartridge" is the backbone of that greatest of modern tobacco inventions—

Baron's Pipe Filler

"Worth $30—Costs 30 Cents"

It's this little "cartridge" that holds straight the shreds of tobacco—so that they burn lengthwise and make your pipe-smoke draw and burn as freely and sweetly as the very best of cigars.

It's this little "cartridge" that holds the blend intact— so that each pipeful gets all of the mixture's scientific richness and flavor.

This little "cartridge," loaded into your pipe by Baron's Pipe Filler, means 100 per cent of smoke-pleasure — it adds to economy, convenience and health—it is a discovery of vast importance to the 20th Century smoker.

And Baron's Pipe Filler is selling like hot cakes—just as it ought to sell. Bought yours yet?

Craven Mixture and Black Cat Mixture are the two cracking good brands that (as yet) are sold in "cartridges."

MARS AND HAMILTON WILL RACE FOR PRIZE ACROSS CONTINENT

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—J. C. Mars, better known as "Bud" Mars, the daring little aviator who dropped into the bay while attempting to fly from Sheepshead race track to Fort Hamilton, has arrived in New York and announced that he would begin preparations immediately to fly from Los Angeles to New York in order to win the $50,000 prize offered by William Randolph Hearst for the first aeroplane flight across the American continent.

With the advent of Mars as a prospective contestant in the trans-continental flight competition, there are prospects of a wonderful aerial duel over the breadth of the United States between two of the most spectacular fliers in America. Mars, who flies a Curtiss biplane, was prompted to make immediate announcement of his intention because he read in the New York American of Hamilton's purpose. In order to achieve the flight before Hamilton is ready, Mars says he will start from Los Angeles in February. Hamilton said on Sunday that he would not attempt the flight until April. When he heard yesterday that Mars is planning to start two months earlier, he said:

Hamilton Bound to Win.

"All right, he's on. I'm going to get that prize. I'm going to get ready to go in February. It will be the case of Latham and Bleriot over again. The man who can get his machine in trim first and scatter parts along the road will get away first. I'm going to be that man if I don't kill myself at this international meet."

Mars is desperately in earnest about being the first to make the trans-continental flight. He says it has been the dream of his life to fly from ocean to ocean. With the purpose of doing it he has been making all his exhibition work simply a process of training for his great achievement.

There probably is no aviator in America better qualified to make the flight than Mars. He has been an active aeronaut for the past twelve years. As a mere boy he began to make parachute leaps from hot air balloons at country fairs. When the first dirigible balloon was brought out by Captain Thomas S. Baldwin, Mars was one of the earliest helpers. With the advent of the dirigible as a county fair attraction Mars became one of the most noted air sailors in the West.

He knows the West better than he does the East. And he knows the East as well as the average New Yorker knows Broadway. Mars is especially well acquainted with the aerial conditions in the West. Having flown above all the localities on the map beyond the Mississippi river, he feels that he can find his way through almost any kind of aerial disturbance that obtains out there.

Mars Had Planned Flight.

"When I heard about the prize offered by Mr. Hearst for the flight across the continent I was not surprised. It seemed natural that it should come from him. Neither did it seem to me that it was a wild dream, because I have been planning a flight across the continent ever since I handled a dirigible balloon. Several years ago I made up my mind when the time came I would be the first to make the flight, and I'm going to be if I do nothing else until I accomplish it.

When I start on the trans-continental flight from Los Angeles I purpose to go by way of Southern Arizona, New Mexico and then into Colorado.

CRUEL REVENGE PLOT IS FOILED BY PATROLMAN

It was cruel vengeance that William Walker, with no home address, planned in the early hours of to-day after he had been ejected from the restaurant of Leo Marcenetti at No. 171 Court street, West End.

He had a disagreement with Leo, who with the aid of Charles Pucent, the chef, lifted him up more or less gently and set him outside the door. But William was not to be so easily dealt with.

He waited long and finally saw the lights go out in the eat shop, and its proprietor and chef retire to bed on the second floor. Then, according to the charge which the police lay against him, he crept to the door and by the use of a false key gained access to the rooms of his enemies.

With a low chuckle of glee he took all the clothes of the two men and crept out into the night. "Aha!" said William, "it's the ash barrel for Leo in the morning."

Just then he spied a patrolman in Cambridge street. He started in the opposite direction. He was captured. He vowed the clothes were his own. A search of the clothes brought forth cards upon which in letters of black were the names of Leo and Charles.

Back to the restaurant and the rooms went William and the police officer. Leo and Charles were awakened and the identification of the clothes made.

William had been foiled. What was more he was placed behind iron bars at the station house.

PAVLUTCHEK'S FAMILY WILL BE DEPORTED

Following the decision of the government yesterday that Theophile Pavlutchek, the Russian who is charged with stealing $3,100 from the Russian telegraph department, was to be sent back to Russia, it was announced to-day that his wife and five children would also be deported.

Since his arrest several weeks ago the wife and children have lived in a deplorable state of poverty, not having enough to eat. This was brought to the attention of the authorities through the discovery of the Charles Street Jail officials that Pavlutchek had been saving a portion of the food given him for his family.

Former Congressman Joseph Conry, Russian consul in Boston, called the attention of Colonel George B. Billings, immigration commissioner, to the fact that Pavlutchek's family were in destitute circumstances and Colonel Billings said to-day that under a section of the law which provides that criminals shall not be admitted to this country, the wife and children would be returned.

Colonel Billings said that he wished to have an inspector make a more detailed investigation of the case before he took definite action toward returning the wife and children. It was not known whether or not they would be sent back on the same ship with Pavlutchek, who will go as a prisoner to an undetermined fate following a court-martial.

DOLLAR IS MORE RESPECTED THAN STUDENT'S LAMP

To-day we have an aristocracy of boodle, and the dollar mark is more respected than the student's lamp or family rest. There are also glaring extremes of wealth and poverty. The products of the greatly increased power of machinery have not been equitably distributed. Millowners have been getting the lion's share of the profits. A fallacy has prevailed that money must always yield a dividend whether human life and labor do or not. There is overcrowding, especially in the slums and tenement districts which surround our great factories, where whole families live on such terms of enforced familiarity that common decency is impossible. If the Christian church is to save the world, it must save the cities. —Rev. Hugh S. Bradley to Congregational Council.

PARIS STRIKE OFF WORK IS RESUMED

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The railroad strike has been called off. This was decided at a meeting of the strike committee of the National Railroaders' Union. Work was resumed on all lines to-day.

8-HOUR BILL WAS UNJUST, SAYS DRAPER

NEW BEDFORD, Oct. 18. — Governor Draper devoted his speech here last night almost entirely to stating his position on various labor measures, particularly the so-called eight-hour bill, which he has twice vetoed. Other speakers included Senator Lodge, Robert Luce and Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham. Senator Lodge spoke on the cotton schedules in the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill.

Governor Draper said, "I vetoed one act which was passed by the Legislature which was so-called labor legislation. It was called 'an act to constitute eight hours a day's work for public employes.' This bill is not an eight-hour bill in any sense of the word. It is simply an act to make the enforcement of the eight-hour law now on the statute books easier.

"This bill does not apply to any laborers on any class of work outside of those employed by the Commonwealth and a few cities and towns, and it applies to only a comparatively small part of these people. It is class legislation and it affects only a very limited class.

"This was a political bill and would be of no substantial benefit to the working people."

MEAT PACKERS INDICTED HERE

The Federal Grand Jury has returned indictments in this city against:

John Reardon & Sons Company of Cambridge, and the Consolidated Rendering Company of Portland, Me., on the charge that they have unlawfully combined in restraint of interstate trade; against Ferdinand Sulzberger of New York city in the name of and through John Reardon & Sons Company, and Horatio W. Heath of Boston, in the name of and through the Consolidated Rendering Company, and against Horatio W. Heath, manager of the Consolidated Rendering Company, and Cyrus S. Hapgood of Boston, manager of the New England Rendering Company, for conspiracy in restraint of trade.

The indictment says John Reardon & Sons Co. and the Consolidated Rendering Company prior to three years ago brought raw materials and shipped them to various points to be made up into products in strict competition, but that after October 17, 1907, they unlawfully combined.

The conspiracy indictment alleges conspiracy on the part of several defendants with the Eastern Oil and Rendering Company of Portsmouth, N. H.

TO DROP HOWARD LIBEL PROCEEDINGS

SALEM, Oct. 18.—District Attorney W. Scott Peters has notified the Superior Court that he did not wish to prosecute the joint indictment of Hemah F. Curtis and Mayor Howard, charged with criminal libel of Michael J. Boyle. The State's case was not strong enough to present to a jury and the Court directed that the indictment be nol prossed. This ends, it is believed, the many court actions in which various political interests have involved Salem's Mayor.

APPRENTICES GET DEATH BENEFITS

Death benefits of $200 for apprentices as well as for journeymen, instead of the $50 benefit allowed for journeymen alone, have been adopted by the Operative Plasterer's International Union, according to a statement issued by Edward J. McGivern, business agent for the Boston local, who has just returned from the Columbus, O., convention of the general organization. Mr. McGivern was elected first international vice-president of the union at the Columbus convention.

QUEER MIX-UP IN QUINCY'S COUNCIL

QUINCY, Oct. 18.—Unless Mayor William T. Shea uses his ex-officio right and calls a special meeting of the Quincy City Council in the meantime, there will be no official business transacted by that body until after Jan. 1, 1911, when a newly elected council convenes. This strange condition of municipal affairs was created when the meeting of the council was declared adjourned after a suspension of rule one which provides for the naming of the date of the next meeting.

MOTHER OF SIXTEEN WEDS SECOND TIME

WOOSTER, O., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Enna Lockbaugh, a widow, until recently a resident of Mansfield, is the bride of James O'Connell, a laborer, of Rittman. Mrs. Lockbaugh-O'Connell, although but little past the prime of life, is the mother of sixteen children, all living. The youngest is a baby in arms, and the oldest is aged thirty.

GENERAL HALSEY'S CHAUFFEUR HELD

SALEM, Oct. 18.—Edward Dupree, chauffeur for General Fredrick R. Halsey of New York, was given a hearing on the charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Conductor Samuel H. Hollingshead at North Beverly, September 26, in the local court and was held in $4,000 bonds for the Grand Jury. General Halsey was in court. abdomen.

INVESTIGATION OF FATAL CAR WRECK BEGINS

The investigation of the real cause of the West Boston bridge trolley wreck was resumed in earnest to-day. Particular attention was devoted to the discovery said to have been made yesterday by the city officials that the tracks at the Boston end of the bride are laid in violation to the plans approved by the Board of Aldermen when a location was asked by the railroad.

It appears from the report made to Mayor Fitzgerald by Superintendent of Streets Rourke that the railroad has used old trackage instead of relaying as the plans submitted to the Board of Aldermen for their approval called for. This makes a difference of 30 feet at the widest point of variance.

This discovery on the part of the city officials followed a request made by the Mayor to the railroad commission asking that they speedily institute an investigation to determine where blame for the accident shall be placed.

Urges Ambulance Corps.

The Mayor also wrote to General William A. Bancroft urging the necessity on the part of the Boston Elevated for establishing an ambulance corps by which skilled attendance and medical and surgical supplies could be rushed to the scene of any disaster.

All but two of the three score injured Saturday evening are now at their homes, having left the hospitals. The two who are still in the Massachusetts General Hospital are the conductor of the ill-fated car, James L. Purcell, and Miss Petre Johnson of Watertown. Both are improving and will probably leave the hospital in a few days.

The funeral of Arthur W. Rice, who was killed in the wreck was held this afternoon from his home, No. 181 Windsor street, Cambridgeport. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Flewelling of Cambridge.

J. Harvey White, representing the Boston Elevated, to-day issued this statement in reply to the charge that there was irregularity in the laying of the tracks.

"The facts in regard to the location of the tracks of the West End Street Railway Company from Charles street over the Cambridge bridge are as follows:

Statement by J. H. White.

"On June 5, 1906, the Board of Aldermen granted a location for tracks between Charles street and the Cambridge bridge. This location was approved by the Mayor and subsequently approved by the Board of Railroad Commissioners. Before any work was done upon this location it was found that it might interfere with the proposed elevated structure over Charles street. Consequently, construction of tracks upon this location was indefinitely postponed, and the right of the company to construct tracks on this loaction has been extended on four different occasions by the various boards of aldermen and the mayor, and is now extended until April 11, 1911.

"On July 2, 1906, the Cambridge Bridge Commission granted the West End Street Railway Company the right to construct, maintain and use double tracks on the Cambridge bridge, with all necessary curves, crossovers and connections connecting with the existing tracks of said company at either end, as bown by red lines on plan of A. L. Plimpton. Tais location was approved by the railroad commissioners on July 31, 1906.

Filing of Plans.

"The plan which was filed with the Bridge Commission and the Railroad Commissioners was dated March 5, 1905, and did not show the curves and connections. On June 29, 1906, a plan showing the curves and connections was sent as actually constructed to Mr. L. H. McLain, inspector of the Board of Railroad Commissioners and on December 28, 1906, the Board of Railroad Commissioners issued the following order.

"'Examinations having been made of a section of the West End Street Railway in the cities of Boston and Cambridge, consisting of double tracks, extending in Cambridge street in Boston from a point west of Charles street to the Cambridge bridge, over said bridge and in Main street, in Cambridge, to a point west of First street, the length of said track measured as a single track being about 5,103 feet, it is "'Ordered, that the board hereby certify that all laws relating to construction have been complied with and the railway appears to be in a safe condition for operation.'"

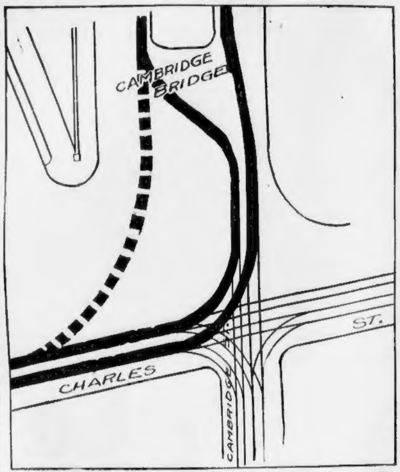
Diagram of Disputed Trolley Track Routes



The dotted lines indicate the route as approved by the Board of Aldermen. The heavy black lines show the tracks as they are now placed, with curve held responsible for fatal wreck Saturday evening.

45 CARS READY FOR BIG MOTOR TRUCK CONTEST

By J. C. KERRISON.

The committee having in charge the Commercial Truck Contest of the BOSTON AMERICAN to be held on Friday and Saturday next, had an extended meeting at the rooms of the Bay State Automobile Association yesterday afternoon. These officers went over the maters in a thorough manner, settling many questions and virtually completing the final arrangements of what promises to be the greatest motor truck contest in this country.

One or two other contests have been held, but their total number of entries for gasoline vehicles was no where near the number that is entered for the contest on Friday and Saturday, there being now forty-five cars entered as competitors, and half a dozen cars as officials.

The result of this work is particularly gratifying and it assures the Boston business men of the greatest possible demonstration of the practibility, efficiency and economy of motor trucks. The result of the test cannot but be decidedly advantageous to the industry, as a whole, and it is freely conceded that nothing has ever occurred in New England, or elsewhere which has stimulated business interests as much as this run will the motor truck interest of the country.

Interest Widespread.

The entrants are taking no greater interest in the contest than are the merchants of Boston and vicinity who are looking forward to it as showing them, by actual public test, just what it costs to carry a given load a given distance.

At its meeting yesterday, the committee decided that each car shall carry its maximum load as per its catalogued specifications. All vehicles carrying more than the maximum load, will not receive credit for the same in the computation of the data that determines the final award. To permit trucks to carry an overload, and to credit them with the same in computing the cost, was felt to put a premium on the overloading trucks, and it being the intention of the run to prove that cars can perform the functions as per their catalogue rating, the committee feels duty bound to take this attitude.

At the time, it was determined that the cars should be weighed empty on the same scale, namely the official scale in Haymarket square, any time during the hours of 1 to 6, on Thursday afternoon. Mr. A. D. Peck will be in charge of this but the official weighing will be done by Mr. H. C. Davis, who for nineteen years had handled the weights in the Haymarket square station. On Friday morning, from 7 to 8 o'clock, the trucks will be weighed loaded at this same place, and observers will report to the committee there not later than 7 o'clock, and the moment that the truck to which they are assigned is weighed, they will take position on the same and remain there until relieevd by some member of the committee.

Start at Cottage Farm.

After being weighed, the trucks will proceed to Winthrop square, where at 8 o'clock, preceded by the official cars, the line of march will be taken up to Cottage Farm's bridge. Here the trucks will be filled with gasoline and sent off on the official trip.

The second weighing of the trucks will be at the Dole store scales at Old Town Green on the way to Ipswich, on Saturday morning.

The creation of the five-ton class necessitated the establishment of an average rate of speed for that class. The committee determined that six miles an hour was about the thing.

The timing and checking of the cars at the different controls will be done by the members of the Chronograph Club of Boston, who will travel in the Ford official car, furnished by Director Fay of the club.

The committee further decided that it had no objections to drivers being changed on the run, providing the change was noted and made agreeable by the observer.

In the question of blockading the route of the cars by accidents to the observers, the board determined that, wherein the delays were caused by the blockading of narrow roads as the result of mishaps to contestants, the observers on other cars blockaded shall make note of the same on their report cards, and the time so lost shall not be considered as a portion of the running time of the said cars.

A meeting of the contestants and observers will be held at the Lenox Hotel at 7:30 o'clock, Thursday evening next at which time contestants will receive their badges and the observers their final instructions.

TO PLAY WITH SYMPHONY AT 6 DAYS' NOTICE

Miss Edith Thompson of Boston will be soloist at the Boston Symphony concert, in Saunder's Theatre, Thursday evening.

This announcement was made just six days before the concert and only half an hour after Miss Thompson was informed that she had been selected to play with the Symphony.

Only the world's most renowned artists are privileged to play with the Symphony Orchestra as soloists, and it would have been years before she received this honor had not chance come to her assistance.

Gilibert, the famous French baritone, was announced as the soloist at the first Harvard concert of the Symphony Orchestra, but Gilibert died suddenly last Wednesday. The great baritone was also to have sung at the Symphony Hall concerts of the orchestra this week. On Thursday, Director Fielder and Manager Ellis decided to have no soloist for the Boston concert,, but it was necessary to secure somebody for the Cambridge concert, as the Saunder's Theatre audiences are fond of soloists.

An appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra is worth very much in the way of prestige to any performer, and it brings abundance of engaements. But no performer would dare to appear with this orchestra without long and careful preparation, and it looked as though it would be dificult to secure an artits. At this juncture Mr. Ellis thought of Miss Thompson, who has given many recitals here, and is pianist of the Smalley Trio, an artiste who has won praise wherever she appeared. He called her up. Would she be willing to appear with the Symphony Orchestra?

As soon as she caught her breath she said she would. Then she asked: "When?"

"In six days."

"That's short notice, but I'll be ready," said the pianist.

Since then she has been practicing Caesar Franck's Symphonic Variations for the pianoforte and orchestra. This is a composition that has broken the heart of more than one ambitious pianist, but when achieved it most effective and beautiful.

When the plucky young pianist appeared at her first rehearsal with the orchestra, the gallant musicians applauded, and they applauded more when she had concluded.

The Harvard students and their friends will undoubtedly emulate their example, especially if they know the circumstances under which Miss Thompson is playing.

She is a pupil of Helen Hopekirk and is only twenty-three years of age. Her selection as soloist has delighted the Boston musical colony.

NEW EVIDENCE FOUND IN HULL DEATH MYSTERY

Chief of Police Frank M. Reynolds of Hull, following the finding yesterday of what is believed to have been the grave in which the mutilated body of Frank Cusumano lay for some time after he had been stabbed to death, to-day obtained evidence which he expects will show that Cusumano did not leave his home at all on Sunday, September 18, when his wife declares he left and she never saw him afterwards.

Chief Reynolds and Patrolman Harry Tremaine have been working unceasingly to complete their case against the two prisoners and it is possible that another arrest may be made. Hull and Hingham citizens have taken occasion to praise the chief and Patrolman Tremaine for the efficient manner in which they have handled this mysterious case.

The grave was found in the midst of a thick growth of underbrush and had been but recently opened. Near the grave were found a blood stained axe said to belong to the Hull fire department, a mattress also stained with blood and a bundle of clothing which is thought to have been worn by Cusumano at the time of his death.

The articles found in the grave supplying one of the missing links in the chain of evidence which the police have been rapidly winding about Mrs. Lena Cusumano,, widow of the murder victim and Enrico Mascioli, a boarder at the Cusumano home, both of whom are in the jail at Plymouth, where they will remain until October 28 when they appear in the Abington court to answer to the charge of murder.

SCOTS ENTERTAIN VISITING PASTORS

At the City Club a banquet was tendered by members of the Scots' Charitable Society of the Rev. Duncan McGregor of New York and the Rev. Archibald McGregor of Ontario. They have been attending the National Convention at Tremont Temple. In the absence of President Pirie of the Scots' Charitable Society, ex-President Alexander McGregor presided. Walter Ballantyne, president of the City Council, extended the welcome of the city to the two distinguished clergymen.

FOSS IS CHEERFUL AND SEES VICTORY

"The Democracy of Massachusetts, in spite of the intrigues of their opponents, can yet win a victory like that in Maine," says Eugene N. Foss, in a statement sent out to-day. "Massachusetts," says Mr. Foss, "can lead the way this Fall as it did last Spring and can secure control of the State Legislature and divide the delegation in Congress. It is because we propose to win that we must not lose a single valuable moment. It will not take long to form our lines both within the Democratic party and among the great elements which stand outside our party. Within the party I have never represented any faction; I have never said a severe word of anyone who thought some other man than I ought to bear the standard. I have been the adherent of no class and no faction and no section. Therefore there can not be a man in the party who, for any personal reason, will find it hard to co-operate with me. The independent elements are all ready to join hands with us in driving out the Republican machine in this State. They have marked time during the last week, anxiouslyand impatiently waiting for us to select our candidate, that they might join forces with us. Let us, therefore, begin the campaign now. I wish to say to my fellow citizens just three words, "we shal win."

NIGHT SCHOOL URGED FOR DORCHESTER

The School Committee now has under consideration Mayor Fitzgerald's urgent suggestion that night schools be established in Dorchester. The Mayor's suggestion, communicated at the last meeting of the committee, was based on complaints he had received that the nearest night school was at the Roxbury High School, while Dorchester, with a population of 125,000, was without one, this meaning that many would-be pupils had no chance to attend night school. The Mayor also inclosed a letter asking for a night school in the Back Bay section. The committee received a petition from a hod carriers' union asking the employment of more interpreters in the night schools to help foreign born scholars in the study of English.

CURRIER TO WED MISS FLETCHER

The engagement of Miss Dorothy Fletcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fletcher of Melrose, and Edward Putnam Currier, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Currier of Wellesley Hills, is announced. Currier, who is now private secretary to Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasurer Curtis at Washington, was captain of the Harvard University baseball nine in 1909, in which year he was graduated from Harvard and was third marshal of his class.

PLAISTED LEADS BY 8,753 VOTES IN MAINE

AUGUSTA, Me., Oct. 18.—The official tabulation of clerk's return on the vote for Governor in the State election on September 12 was completed to-day. The result was as follows: Whole number cast 141,031; Frederick W. Plaisted (Democrat), 73,425; Bert M. Fernald (Republican), 64,672; Robert V. Hunter (Socialist), 1582; James H. Ames (Prohibition), 1352; Plaisted's plurality, 8753.

OUR POPULATION IS NEARLY 100,000,000

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Announcement was made by Census Director Durand that he hoped to announce the total population of the United States by November 15. The indications are that the figures will go beyond 90,000,000 and possibly go close to the 100,000,000 mark.

LUMBAGO FOLLOWS THE GRIP

Patient Suffered for Three Years With Pains in the Back.

When Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Were Tried the Pains Left Gradually and Before Long She Was Entirely Cured.

Lumbago is a form of muscular rheumatism, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which have been so successful in the treatment of various forms of rheumatism, have cured striking cases of this trouble.

Mrs. Louisa Lockard, of 1055 W. Main street, Madison, Ind., who was cured by this treatment, says:

"After a severe attack of the grip I was left with lumbago and suffered with it for three years. I had sharp, shooting pains through my right side and arm and at times could not lift my arm. I was subject to these pains every winter for three years and then the pains went to my back and I could not move nor bear to have anything touch me. I become so bad that I was confined to my bed a great deal and was almost helpless for two weeks. My stomach was also in bad condition and I was very nervous.

"I was under the care of local doctors and for a time they helped me but each attack would be worse than the one before. The doctors finally said I had lumbago and that my system was full of uric acid. Through the advice of a friend I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. A few boxes helped me. The pains gradually left me and I could get around again. My stomach was better and I could sleep well without having any nervous spells. It wasn't long before I was entirely cured."

If you are interested in the remedy that cured Mrs. Lockard, write today for a copy of the new edition of our book on "Diseases of the Blood." It contains information that may save you money and suffering.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

CUBS AND ATHLETICS IN SECOND WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE

MULLIN SAYS SURE VICTORY FOR ATHLETICS

CHANCE CONFIDENT OF TAKING SERIES

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—Frank Chance, manager of the Cubs, said: "We are sorry to lose the opening game, but the defeat will not upset our plans for winning the series. We will enter the remaining contests with as much confidence as ever. Overall proved a disappointment. He seemed to have everything when he was warming up, but when he got on the mound he had nothing."

By GEORGE MULLIN.

Premier pitcher of the Detroit American League team, who faced the Cubs in two world's series.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—A whipped Cub is crouching in his lair, crouching in fear and desperation for the first time, nursing wounds which are new to its pride, wounds which rankle deep because of unexpected superior opposition.

The Chicago Cub is strong. He won a National League championship this year through nothing more than playful scuffing with a weaker playmate. He matched his strength for the first time against a little white elephant, a jungle creature nurtured by that crafty lion tamer, Connie Mack. And the little white elephant knocked down and trampled upon the young bear.

All of which is equivalent to saying that the Athletics, the champions of the American League, defeated the National League champion Cubs in the opening game of the world's championship series at Shibe Park by the easy score of 4 to 1.

Struck Telling Blow.

Philadelphia has not won the highest honors in baseball, not by a long way, by taking the opening game. But the Quaker City has struck the first telling blow, and the first telling blow usually settles a fight. Exceptions prove the rule. Seldom has any team that lost the first game of a world's series been able to triumph over such an evident handicap.

A world's series goes to the team winning the first four games. The Athletics now have one-quarter of the necessary winning number. A stern chase is a long chase, and the Cubs will have to go out first and get the Athletics before they can trim them. Chicago will fight harder to-day than she fought yesterday. But to my mind, the fight will prove as futile.

To-day's victory gave Mack's team that confidence necessary for such an onerous burden. The Cubs were beaten at their own game. The exceptional pitching was surpassed. They were shown up on the path. They were outfielded and outgeneralled.

The night before the Cub camp was one of revel. The team that has so often defended and upheld the supremacy of the National League believed the task of beating Mack's Athletics but a breakfast exercise. The idea was dispelled yesterday. Chicago is a glum and sorry outfit.

It may be that the confidence of the Cubs was overconfidence, such as lost them their big battle with the White Sox in 1906. However, they now have a wholesome respect for Ban Johnson's representatives. In the rest of their games they aim to mix cunning at least with confidence.

Frank Chance, the peerless leader, is somewhat cast down. He has not lost his confidence, but he will not deny that he has found a much more worthy foe than he ever dreamed of.

While Chicago and the Chicago following are disappointed, Philadelphia is plunged in the seventh realm of bliss. The Quaker city, in the opening game, at least encouraged their choice with a record attendance. Philadelphia fans would not bet counterfeit money twenty-four hours ago on their hopes. Odds of 10 to 7 on the Cubs went begging. Now it is a different story. Chicago money is scarce. Around the sporting centers to-night the Athletics rule favorite at 10 to 8, and in some cases 10 to 7. There are few takers at these odds.

While it is true that the Athletics beat the Cubs in the opening battle of this year's championship, the statement should be somewhat qualified. Bender and Baker rather than the local team collectively, trimmed the National League champions.

The one man in the Athletic infield in whom the fans had practically no confidence in such an important series was the real batting hero of the day. Bender kept the Cubs from scoring. Baker drove in the runs for the Athletics. Three of the Athletics' runs, or the margin by which the victory was clinched were directly responsible to the deadly eye of Baker. He himself paved the way to the first run of the game through a clean double to left which opened the second inning.

TINKER TALKS ON THE WORLD SERIES GAMES

Box Office Counts Up $37,424 in First Game

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—The crowd that saw the first world's series game was not the largest that ever attended a baseball game in this city. The official count of the attendance was 26,891, and the total receipts $37,424.50. Of this amount the players will receive $20,209.23; the club owners $13,472.82, and the National Commission $3,742.45.

By JOE TINKER.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—In comparing the relative strength of the Cubs and Athletics I concede every point to our team and cannot see where Mack's club is in the same class with us.

Not that we are so greatly superior, but we have been in these important games before, have stood the gaff and have always proved what a wonderful team the Cubs are when their real skill is tested to the limit.

Naturally, a pennant winning team must have a good pitching staff, and I don't think two better sets of boxmen will be pitted against each other than when Brown, Overall, Reulbach and Coombs, Bender and Plank come together.

Coombs, Bender and Plank are heralded as the stars in their league, and so is our trio. But fans who attend the games only judge the twirler by his ability to pitch certain curves and his control.

Yes, that is the first way to judge them, all right. But then there is another, and it is this one that will win for us. Our boys have the confidence and the ability and are at their best when backing the stiffest sort of an opponent.

Says Chance Outclasses Davis.

Put Chance and Davis, the rival first basemen, together and there is no question that Chance will outplay Davis. Chance will execute plays that Davis has never been able to think of or master. Some first basemen are sensational, leap up for great catches, but fall down just at a time when most needed.

It is the steady and reliable man on first base that succeeds, and Chance is the man for this spot.

With Evers out of the series Collins has been put ahead of Zimmerman. Now, I am going to give Eddie all the credit in the world for being the wonderful player he is.

My friends have told me to watch out for him, as he is likely to pull off something that we won't be looking for. He is a grand fielder, a daring base runner and a hard hitter, but just watch Zimmerman and see if he doesn't travel right with Collins.

In Steinfeldt we have one of the steadiest third basemen in the game to-day. And right now Harry is going at a fast clip and never was in better form. I always prefer the player of Steiny's calibre to the youth who is so uncertain in his movements and that is just the sort of a clever Baker is.

He can hit, so they tell me, but is far from being the finished and all-around player that Steinfeldt is.

STORIES ON SERIES BREAKS ALL RECORDS

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—The local manager of the Western Union said to-day that the company was sending out more newspaper stuff than at any other previous sporting event, with the possible exception of the Jeffries-Johnson fight. "So far," he said, "we have handled many thousands more words than was ever sent out during a world's series before.

CAPTURE WOMAN AFTER TWO YEARS

Miss Bessie Young, alias Bessie Brown, thirty-three, of Charlestown, was arraigned before Judge Wentworth charged with breaking and entering a dwelling in the night time. The police waited for her for more than two years as a warrant was got for her arrest in January, 1908. The alleged break was done while she was a roomer at the house of Mrs. Julia M. Harding, at No. 308 Shawmut avenue.

ZIMMY SLAMS THE AIR.

Zimmerman, touted as the sensation of the series, was not there with the stick in the first game. The first time up he lifted a high foul to Baker. He fanned the other two times at the plate. His fielding was clean cut, however.

Fullerton Compares Rival Teems

COLLINS BEST AT SECOND, Says Expert.

Hugh S. Fullerton, one of the most noted sporting writers in the country, will report the world's series for the BOSTON AMERICAN. His descriptions of the games will form a graphic word-picture.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON

Second base—one of the two most important positions on the infield of any team—furnishes the basis of the greatest argument as to the relative merits of the Cubs and the Athletics in this series for the world's championship.

Anyone who can foresee what is going to happen in that regoin between second base and twenty-two feet of first base during all of the games of the series between the Athletics and the Cubs, will have something on omniscience.

Eddie Collins, the sensation and undoubtedly the best second baseman of the American League, is pitted against Heiny Zimmermann and the following is the only prediction I will venture: Whatever happens, whether Zimmermann wins or loses the series, he will be the sensation of the world's series.

Zimmy is not conservative. Beside him an extreme anarchist seems a mild radical. What he does, he does, and that without reason or excuse, but the main point is that he does it.

The fact that Zimmy cannot figure himself or tell half a second ahead what he will do or how he will do it, is a heavy handicap on anyone trying to figure out how the series will result. If he cannot figure out himself what he is going to do how can anyone else do it? And if he cannot, how can any fielder figure where to play for him, or any pitcher calculate how he will pitch for him.

Both Stars at Par.

Let X represent the Cubs and Y the Athletics, and Zimmy the unknown quantity and Mr. Euclid himself cannot figure out whether the score of the second game will be 11 to 2 in favor of the Cubs or 9 to 0 in favor of the Athletics. One only can calculate on the individual physical gifts of the two men.

Mentally they are about at par. Collins has a little more judgment and uses it a trifle less. Zimmerman does not make an effort to think, working on the theory that instinct beats brains the majority of times—which it does, else Dave Altizer never would be back in the major leagues and Bob Fitzsimmons never would have been champion of the world.

Collins thinks he is a great base runner. Zimmy has no such delusion. Collins runs after the style of Isbell, Altizer and the Boston Red Sox, who run bases with the idea that they will be safe so long as no one closes the gates. He is singularly effective in the American League—but the American League catchers have not been good.

Zimmy runs even wilder—but he is much harder to guess. He runs just as wild as does Collins, but his strength is in his unexpectedness. He never minds little things like signals, but goes or stays as his bunch dictates, and he explains to the manager later if there is any necessity of explanation.

As to speed, Collins is the fastest second baseman in baseball to-day. He is a wonderful ball player and a fighting, hustling, gritty and nervy player. Hitting left handed, he goes to first like a flash and I think he covers more ground moving toward first base on ground balls than any second baseman in the business.

He is after the ball on the jump, goes well toward second, pivots well on the base, throws fast, hard and accurately and helps the slow and lumbersome Davis a whole lot in taking extra ground toward first base.

Zim Natural Player.

I think Zimmerman will make more blunders in fielding and accept a smaller percentage of his chances. Also he will make more startling stops and throws than the sensation of the Athletics. He lacks experience, having been shifted from position to position.

Yet Zimmerman I consider the greatest natural ball player of the day. He is a seris of surprises both at the bat and in the field, and this very element of surprise is likely to help the Cubs.

At bat Collins can outhit him. In fact, I expect Collins to hit hard against the kind of pitching he must face. I expected Zimmerman to hit Bender hard but it is useless to figure him, however, as he reverse all form on himself. He may hit Plank hard and fall down on Morgan and Coombs.

I believe Zimmerman's long drives will help a lot in winning for the Cubs. The Cub pitchers, of course, will work harder against Collins than against any other of the Athletics, and that of itself may turn the tide in favor of the Chicagoan, although I think Collins is better as a second baseman, is faster and a better hitter.

MACK SILENT ON VICTORY OF TEAM

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—Connie Mack, manager of the victorious Athletics, refused to discuss the result of the first game of the world's series except to say that he was pleased. He would not say which pitcher would be used to-day, nor would he say whether his outfield will be the same to-day. He was greatly pleased at the dazzling work of Chief Bender.

YANKS-GIANTS GAME BRINGS IN $10,185.75

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—William H. Locke and Hugh McBreen, business representatives of the National Commission for the local baseball championship series, announced to-day that the receipts of yesterday's game at American League Park between the Americans and Nationals were $10,185.75. Of the gate receipts the National Commission will receive $1,018.57, the players $5,500.30 and each club owner $1,833.44.

A Hilton Model at $12.50

They say of Mr. Powers that he is funny enough to make a sphinx laugh. Certainly the effervescence and pungency of his wit is enough to make the sourest visaged individual grin in spite of himself.

Mr. Powers, like actors generally, is fond of fine clothes.

He likes Hilton Clothes because they are smart, original and exclusive; because they lack nothing that a perfectly groomed gentleman could desire in design, execution and finish.

One feature about them that appeals to everybody is their FLEXIBILITY of DESIGN, the coat settling down gracefully in the wear, making it drape the figure PERFECTLY.

It is the hand-tailoring, hand-stitching and hand-shaping in Hilton Clothes that does this.

They are unquestionably the finest ready-for-service clothes in America—yet they cost no more than ordinary ready-mades.

NELSON WANTS HIS TITLE BACK FROM WOLGAST

By ED W. SMITH.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Bat Nelson is anxious to make a match now with Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion. He wants to clinch it up at this time and throw it open to the best bids, the match to be decided some time next Spring.

The former champion has noted carefully what Wolgast and his manager, Tom Jones, have been saying about the prospects of another championship battle and the remarks have interested him deeply.

In a communication written to me just before he took on Monte Dale in a Kansas City ring Nelson denies with considerable heat that he comes out from under cover at a time when Wolgast had rebroken his arm.

"Who ever heard of me dodging anybody or chasing a cripple?" he said in his letter. "There was a lot of chatter written here that I was supposed to have said about Wolgast, when as a matter of fact I seldom mentioned his name, and then did not talk as if I wanted to fight him with a broken arm.

"All I ask now is that he keep his word to give me a battle next February or March. If he'll do that I'll rest content.

"Right after this match with Dale, if I come out all right, I am willing to hop on a train and meet Jones or Wolgast, or both of them, at the AMERICAN office, and come to an immediate understanding. I don't care whether the date is Washington's Birthday, which is the anniversary of our Port Richmond fight, or St. Patrick's Day, so long as I get the match.

ETHEL LYNNE TO RACE FOR BACK BAY MAN

Chester W. Lasell of the Back Bay and master of the Oakhurst Farm, Whitinsville, is receiving many congratulations in the securing of the black trotting mare Ethel Lynne, by Lynne Bel, 2:10½, dam Bella Wilkes, 2:18½, by Wilkie Collins, 2:19¼, one of the most promising racing prospects for the Grand Circuit season of 1911.

This sensational mare was owned by John Clark of Brooklyn, N. Y., and trained by Jack Phillips, and with only the preparation incident to a few trial miles on a half-mile track around 2:15, she was shipped to the Hudson River track at Poughkeepsie, where she surprised the horsemen by stepping an easy mile in 2:08.

Her trainer and capable judges who saw the performance declared that Ethel Lynne could have materially shaded the time trial had she been forced.

JIMMY GARDNER HAS SHADE ON LEO HOUCK

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—In a special show at the National A. C., Jimmy Gardner of Lowell, Mass., claimant to the world's welterweight title, had slightly the better of Leo Houck, who aspires to the same title. These welters put up a good fight and it was Gardner's clever defense and ring generalship that earned him the popular verdict. Houck, however, was a willing mixer all through the six rounds of milling, and, at times, forced the milling, but his leads were often wild and his opponent's cleverness made him miss many good chances.

CHAMPION BILLIARD TOURNEY FOR BOSTON

By ED COGSWELL.

Billiard enthusiasts in Greater Boston are strong for a tournament here by either the best experts in the professional or the amateur line, to be decided some time the coming Winter. Many years ago the best professional matches in the country were made and played in Boston, but in recent years the journeys and championship battles have been held mainly in New York, Chicago, and occasionally in other cities.

This for the professional end. The amateurs have varied their annual tournaments, though none have yet been decided in Boston. With the thousands upon thousands of billiard followers hereabouts it is certainly time recognition was given by the powers that be to the benefit of handing a treat to the local devotees of the game.

Boston is always red hot for a contest. Baseball draws better in this city than in any in the entire country—watch the record attendance at the Red Sox games the past season. Horse racing has for fifty years been noted for the crowds it has attracted here. In no city do the theatres do a better business. Boston is particularly an amusement city.

Not always, but now and then, Boston wants a contest for its money. It is all well enough for the champions of billiards to play exhibitions here. It is very entertaining. We have had that line now for several seasons. Billiardists and lovers of the game are now asking that the professionals get together here for the title, and that when the next National Amateur Billiard tournament is held it be at the B. A. A.

It is up to the room keepers in Boston to unite to get the Brunswick-Balke-Collender people to make a sweepstakes tournament in which may take part in the 18-2 game Willie Hoppe, Calvin Demarest, George Sutton, H. P. Cline, George Sloson, Albert Cutler, the Frenchman, Fermin Cassignol, and the wonder recently produced in Germany.

Willie Hoppe, through holding the championship at both the 18-2 and 18-1 styles of game, prevents there being an open international tournament, as in the past season and the ones of the years before.

NEW BASEBALL CLUB IS SURE

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 18.—D. A. Fletcher of Toledo, who recently startled the baseball world with his proposed new league in opposition to the National and the American leagues, to-day announced that he will be in New York city on or about November 1 to open permanent headquarters for the new league there.

"I have sixty-two stars of both leagues, including players of five of the present major league teams signed up," said Fletcher to-day. "The new league will consist of eight clubs. Four cities are absolutely without question, Boston, New York, Chicago and St. Louis. The others will be chosen from Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Brooklyn and possibly Washington."

EXETER'S SECRET DRILL.

EXETER, N. H., Oct. 18.—The practice at Exeter was secret for the first time this season. Coach Murphy barred every one from the field and put the team through some new formations.

24 MEN ENTER SIX DAY RACE

Twenty-four of the fastest men in the game have signed entries for the annual six day bike race at the Boston arena, beginning next week. Twenty of the twenty-four men who have signed are veterans of the six day race and have been through some hard fights.

The men will ride ten hours each day, starting at 1 p. m., October 31, and finishing at 11 p. m., Saturday, November 5. Manager McLean has arranged to have the men ride until 2 o'clock in the morning, in order to give the night workers a chance to see the race on Tuesday, November 1, and Thursday, November 3.

Among some of the prominent teams are: Floyd McFarland and Jackie Clarke, Walter and Patsy Logan, Worth Mitten and Freddy West, Floyd Krebs and Norman Anderson, Alfred Goulette and Paddy O'Sullivan Heir, "Pedlar" Palmer and Wright, all four riders coming from Australia, and the Bedell brothers of Long Island, New York.

DARTMOUTH IN SECRET WORK

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 18.—The Dartmouth team continued its preparation today for the Williams game by going into secret practice. The work this week will be hard. Coach Randall is not satisfied with the condition of the team and says that the large score against Vermont does not prove that the Green has the "goods" as yet. The work behind the closed fence consisted of new formations and a long signal drill. These plays will not be known until the Green meets the Purple Saturday.

The Story of the Sale

Tuesday of this week notices of the Mortgagee's Foreclosure Sale of the stock and fixtures of Herbert R. Houghton & Co., 7 Broad Street, Boston, were sent to the tailoring trade of Boston and vicinity.

The sale was held Friday at Houghton's princely apartments in the Financial District, under the shadow of the great Board of Trade building.

There was rivalry at the sale—it was expected—it had to be. Houghton's clientele was composed exclusively of State Street Bankers and Brokers, the wheat barons, the Pork and Beef Magnates, the hay and grain generals—the food controllers of the Board of Trade—men who can afford fine clothing. And Houghton had the goods they wanted, the last say in styles and the first say in quality and celebrity—the Immortals among the weaves of the world.

You'd be surprised to see the tailoring concerns represented at that sale—concerns that go across the water themselves for woolens. So great was the rivalry for the goods that the manager took advantage of it and sold the woolens, "entire stock or none," cash on the minute. Not a yard did they get—not a yard did I miss—I didn't even let them remove the original tickets or name tags from the goods. Those you can see when you order the goods at my store.

With so many of the regulars absent, the team which ran through the signals was necessarily [illegible] of a patchwork affair and was confused mainly [illegible] The eleven was as follows: Left end, Amory; left tackle, Hunt [illegible]; left guard, Stow; centre, Huntington; right guard, Blodgett; right tackle, Bush; right end, O'Flaherty; quarterback, Corbett, Campbell and T. H. Frothingham.

Although Corbett was used a great deal in the game with Amherst, he was not given a rest, since he has been out of the game for sometime previous to the contest last Saturday and the coaches desired to get him back [illegible] form.

No Let-Up For Stars.

Campbell, the speedy little fellow, who has been playing substitute to Corbett, was [illegible] showed his usual speed [illegible] the game [illegible] work [illegible] defense [illegible] strong man.

It may be that the coaches [illegible] his ability and therefore are giving [illegible] candidates for tackle [illegible] what they are made of [illegible] back for a case of need.

Previous to the [illegible] which was carried on under the direction of Head Coaches Haughton and his assistants, Leary, Cutting and Fish, Corbett, Trvorg and T. H. Frothingham had a bit of a punting bee, the first two mentioned booting away some exceptionally good spirals.

Corbett is one of the mainstays of the Crimson in the punting line but by his work in the Amherst game "Dono" Minot again brings to the minds of the Harvard followers that he is a man to be reckoned with when it comes to punting.

Manager Herbert [illegible] of the football [illegible] yesterday, sprung good news [illegible] of the squad in announcing that Paul Withington, brother of the present [illegible] of the Harvard team and probably one of the best all-round athletes that ever came to Harvard, will arrive in Cambridge on Friday as assistant to [illegible] Treasurer of Athletics William F. Garcelon.

Withington, it will be remembered, was centre on the varsity eleven last Fall, and for several years held down a seat in the varsity eights which defeated Yale, to say nothing of having been captain of the wrestling team and amateur heavyweight wrestling champion of New England.

He will find time from his duties under Mr. Garcelon to aid in coaching the linesmen on Soldiers' Field [illegible] his assistance will come [illegible] as Coaches Blagden and Nouse, who have been helping Haughton for some time past, have been obliged to leave the University.

A training table for certain members of the Harvard second football team [illegible] this morning with breakfast at the Varsity Club on Holyoke street. The following men were taken on: E. S. Blodgett, [illegible] Callender, J. M. Hager, J. F. [illegible] [illegible], F. A. Jenckes, G. [illegible] Magnee, F. C. Paine and Coach R. M. Page. Others will be added from time to time as such action warrants.

The teams now at the training tables at the Varsity Club are the varsity and second football teams and the cross country team.

WORLD RECORD DEER HEAD IS HUNT TROPHY

By DICK CARPENTER.

Young, though the big game season is, a deer with the world's record number of prongs or points on his antlers has been brought down in the Maine woods. The head has no ever fifty points. They are real points and not nubbins as some of the incredulous will be [illegible] The record up to [illegible] was thirty-three prongs.

As yet I have not learned of the circumstances surrounding the kill but from the description of the head as given by S. L. Crosby, the big taxidermist of Bangor, I assume the animal was not a small one.

As a rule these freak heads that one [illegible] while are of [illegible] are out of proportion and do not [illegible] good however [illegible] prongs [illegible]

[illegible] by [illegible] shipped the head [illegible] it would [illegible] the [illegible] first shot at him [illegible]

With the many prongs the spread is pretty wide, [illegible] points being twenty-eight inches apart. The teeth are somewhat worn but in very good condition and it would seem the animal was just in its prime.

Record Set of Antlers.

[illegible] sportsman in Bangor who has seen the head says it is a record and I've [illegible] no one around Boston who can show [illegible] after one. It will probably stand for [illegible] as the largest set of antlers ever [illegible] red or cotton tail Virginia deer [illegible] in Maine but in the world.

[illegible] weather has not tempted many to [illegible] to the fields after the upland quarry [illegible] the season opened, although in Massachusetts the shooting is said [illegible] fairly good in many places.

[illegible] vicinity of Wakefield grey squirrels and partridge are plentiful [illegible] woodcock have not shown up in any [illegible] as the frost gets in its work on [illegible] and takes off a few leaves the [illegible] with partridge [illegible] began [illegible] up more loudly than they have.

[illegible] continued warm weather has also [illegible] the shore men peevish for colder [illegible] which means a movement of the [illegible] birds and a little wind to drive them [illegible] different ponds. At the same time [illegible] are being spared in working with [illegible] decoys and some of the best work in [illegible] line will be seen on the South Shore within the coming month.

ALL-STAR SHOW ON CARD AT ARMORY CLUB

[illegible] for tonight [illegible] there will be two six [illegible] round engage[illegible] before the [illegible]

[illegible] of Philadelphia [illegible] Joe Geary, [illegible] amateur [illegible] featherweight [illegible] performed [illegible] Connie [illegible] of New York. Bill McKinnon [illegible] to meet [illegible]

Thomas always makes good [illegible] will find a strong, sturdy opponent in Schmidt who has just beaten Eddie Harvey of Philadelphia, and who has won over Jockey Carroll and Jimmy Howard during the past month. This should be [illegible] hard struggle from start to finish.

Much interest is attached to the other ten-round bout where Knockout Brown makes his first appearance in this city. He will be opposed by Kid Goodman, one of the best trial horses in the lightweight class. Brown has been the sensation of the year in New York, and will prove a revelation to the local sports, as he is always busy, both hands going like the [illegible] and he knows nothing but mixing it up. As Goodman likes this sort of game it is going to prove one of the best bouts that could possibly be arranged.

BOXING NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Knockout Brown, who boxes at the Armory Club [illegible] has four other bouts this month.

Jeff McMahon [illegible] South Boston heavyweight, is training hard every day for his match with [illegible] O'Kelly, at Syracuse next Monday.

INDIANS REST FOR PRINCETON BATTLE

CARLISLE, Pa., Oct. 18. [illegible] Indians only ran through signals [illegible] to give the redskins a chance to rest [illegible] up before the Princeton [illegible] Captain Houser and Quarterback [illegible] off the crippled list jogged around [illegible] track. Coach Warner knows that [illegible] will be gaited at high speed [illegible] Indian game and will do everything [illegible] to re-shape the aborigines.

HEFFERMAN SHADES FRANK LOUGHREY

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—Joe Hefferman, the West Philadelphia lightweight, had a shade the better of Frank Loughrey in their six-round bout at the West End [illegible]

During the entire six rounds Loughrey forced the fighting and in the clinches gave Hefferman all the punishment [illegible] could hand [illegible] Hefferman seemed to [illegible] for one punch which he landed [illegible] and shook Loughrey. Several times Hefferman got loose and landed some [illegible] to Loughrey's jaw which rocked the latter but he was always back at Hefferman in an instant and walloped away at his [illegible] and face.

STANLEY KNOCKS OUT BOWKER IN EIGHTH

LONDON, Oct. 18.—Digger Stanley knocked out the ex-bantam champion, Bowker, in the eighth round of the [illegible] before the National Sporting Club. [illegible] fight was for the bantam championship of Great Britain and a purse of $3,000.

NELSON AND GALLANT IN MANCHESTER BOUT

The French sports of Manchester, N. H., are elated at the opportunity to see Johnny Gallant, the local bantamweight who has been cutting a wide swath in the ranks of the local lads. Within two weeks he dispatched six opponents with ease and now he is greatly in demand. Gallant has been matched to meet Kid Nelson, the Manchester lad who holds the championship of the Granite State, in the semi final at the show at the Queen City A. C. in Manchester next Friday night, at which Eddie Murray of South Boston and Johnny Doran of New York are to be the principals in a fifteen round match.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

Educating Girls

By DOROTHY DIX

THE dawn [illegible] than all the professional [illegible] the world [illegible] glad day of [illegible]

They are TEACHING GIRLS HOW TO COOK!

Do you [illegible] ever [illegible] mean for every [illegible] free hand cook [illegible] gas range? [illegible] life will [illegible] bread, no more [illegible] dish water [illegible] no more leathery steaks and [illegible]

More! When every [illegible] cook we shall have

No more servant [illegible]
No more dyspepsia.
Less drunkenness.
Less poverty.
Fewer [illegible]
Less [illegible]
Fewer [illegible]
Less [illegible]

In a [illegible] and prosper[illegible] for the [illegible] heart [illegible] life is [illegible] gether.

A Conservation Measure

I[illegible] results [illegible] teaching every [illegible] in the public schools to be a good plain cook. It's the greatest conservation measure ever drafted, for it reaches out and preserves the welfare, the [illegible] and purses of generations yet to be born.

The advantages of teaching cooking in the public school are manifold. [illegible] the only way in which to reach the class that needs it most, the very poor and [illegible] these girls do not [illegible] to cook because they don't know how themselves. Any settlement worker will tell you that the most wasteful [illegible] in the world are [illegible] the woman of the [illegible] knew how to [illegible]

These settlement workers will also tell you that [illegible] there is so much drunkenness [illegible] in the slums is because [illegible] messes their wives cook up [illegible] are neither palatable [illegible] the men supply the lack of [illegible] with liquor.

What a reformation [illegible] deadly frying pan will [illegible] of young daughters armed with savory stews and ragouts and chuck roasts, worked [illegible] so long [illegible] the paper [illegible] husbands.

The Servant Question

The second advantage of teaching cooking in the public schools is that it will settle the servant question pro and con, going and coming, and vice versa. [illegible] dinner [illegible] household by the [illegible] are women doing [illegible]. The only reason [illegible] is because [illegible] to do it, and they [illegible] jobs, but when [illegible] to cook scientifically [illegible] out that cookery is one of [illegible] the most interesting [illegible] of all the arts, and that [illegible] deal more exciting to evolve [illegible] than it is to work flowers [illegible] dinky linen things, or daub up good [illegible] with bad painting.

A Joyous Certainty

The servant problem will also cease to be a problem and become a joyous certainty when it was to just as much a matter of course for a girl to know how to cook as it is for her to know how to read and [illegible] will get [illegible]

A[illegible] advantage of teaching cooking in the public schools is that it takes [illegible] of the class of menial occupation and puts it where it deserves to [illegible] the learned professions. In [illegible] silly girls have despised [illegible] and bragged that they [illegible] without burning it. It will [illegible] more respect for women [illegible] avocation when it [illegible] up put upon it.

[illegible] teaching cooking in the public really and truly the first body [illegible] ever been struck at the [illegible]. There are no statistics [illegible] young couples first quarrels [illegible] efforts in the cook [illegible] when a tired and hungry [illegible] hard day's work to find [illegible] would kill an ostrich on [illegible] his young wife with [illegible] and temper, the dove of peace [illegible] takes flight from that [illegible] it never comes [illegible]

A Jolt for Romance

That kind of a home isn't what a man [illegible] for. He feels defrauded, and he [illegible] and romance gets a [illegible] which it never recovers. More [illegible] to death on soggy bread than we wot of, and the grounds [illegible] coffee pot have been the real [illegible] for many a divorce.

But how different will be the case [illegible] bride will know how to keep [illegible] when her experiments in [illegible] not [illegible] made at the [illegible] her new [illegible] digestion.

The Age of Motored Things

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, by American [illegible]

THE wonderful age of the world I sing—
The age of battery, coil and spring,
Of steam, and storage, and motored thing.

Though faith may slumber and art seem dead,
And all that is spoken has once been said,
And all that is written were best unread.

Though hearts are iron and thoughts are steel,
And all that has value is mercantile,
Yet marvelous truths shall the age reveal.

Aye, greater the marvels this age shall find
Than all the centuries left behind,
When faith was a bigot and art was blind.

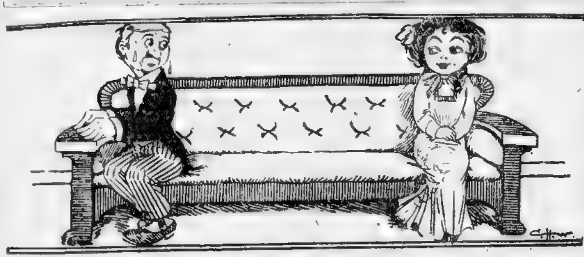
Oh, sorry the search of the world for gods,
Through faith that slaughters and art that lauds,
While reason sits on its throne and nods.

But out of the leisure that men will know,
When the cruel things of the sad earth go,
A Faith that is Knowledge shall rise and grow,

In the throb and whir of each new machine
Thinner is growing the veil between
The visible earth and the world's unseen.

The True Religion shall leisure bring;
And Art shall awaken and Love shall sing;
Oh, ho! for the age of the motored thing!

At the Country Store---By Kennett Harris



Hud was one of these yer bashful boys.

"THAT pesky young one got under the sofy an' listened to what they was a-sayin, so after that [illegible] keepin' it to themselves," chuckled Old Man Somarindyk. "He allowed it was better'n a circus. He won't tell all they said, becus Vhos gin him as much as six bits' worth o' candy to keep his mouth shet."

"I'd a-gin him a right good paddlin' if it was me," said the storekeeper.

"When I set with a gal, I allus uster look under the sofy an' see there wasn't nobuddy around, 'sides hangin' my hat on the knob o' the door, leavin' the lamp was turned right low,'" Eben Baxter told the circle.

"That's all right, too," approved Washington Hancock. "There's other things, though, that it stands a feller in hand to do. The lamp don't want to be turned too blame low, for one thing."

"Why's that?" querier Sol Baker, interestedly.

"Well, you're apt to miss a heap," replied Hancock. "I uster like to look at a gal an' see how she was a-takin' it. It's a right pretty sight if you ever took notice. An' there's other reasons. I reckerleck a feller name o' Hud Jackson an' it was this a-way.

How Hud Did It

Hud was one o' these yer bashful boys. If a gal poked a finger at him, he'd turn all colors, he felt so cheap. So, as a gin'ral thing, he kep' away from where the gals was until he met up with the right one. She was a mighty peart lookin' piece, name o' Sade Burroughs, an' I reckon she took a consid'able of a shine to Hud.

"Anyway, Hud beaued her around for quite a spell, but, from all I heerd, he never said much of anythin' to her. Jes' looked at her when she wasn't a lookin' at him an' got red in the face when she ketched him at it—that kine. He tol' me one time that his tongue felt 'sif it was tied up in double knots when he wanted to tell her what a heap he thought of her, an' it pestered him to death. He couldn't sleep nights for thinkin' of it.

"Finerly there was a show come to Fairfax, an' a passel of the boys an' gals went over in a bobsled to take it in. There was a feller on the stage that was a makin' love to all the gals in the piece. A turrible dude he was, but he certin'y did know what to say to 'em. He'd tell 'em how bewchus they was an' how the ragin' fires o' passion was lit with consumin' flames in his buzzum, standin' off about six foot from 'em, an' layin' it off like a Fourth o' July speech an' windin' up by goin' down on one knee with both arms out.

"It was the slickest thing you ever see, but Hud sat all through it with his lip hangin' 'sif he'd lost a dollar an' found two bits. Oncet in a while Sade 'ud nudge him an' say, 'Ain't that jest lovely, Hud?' But all he'd do was nod his haid an' look foolish.

Learning the Lesson

"When he got alone by hisse'f he studied an' studied on it, but the more he studied the worse he felt. 'I cain't never says things like that to her, an' now she's heerd 'em she'll nachally expect 'em,' he says to hisse'f. 'What's the use a-tryin'?' he says.

"All the same he done tried to think up a mess o' stuff that he allowed Sade might like an' he got a pen an' ink an' wrote up to midnight after he'd got the chores done, gaumin' himself up to the eyes an' around to the back of his ears with ink an' chewin' up a couple o' dozen pen-holders. Then he'd go out to the woods an' memerize it till he could speak it right off peart.

The Crucial Moment

"Then he took Sade out [illegible] an' started to say it, but it stuck [illegible] throat like a [illegible] done by it was to have Sade [illegible] to be sure to rub his chist with [illegible] an' taller his nose afore he went [illegible]

"'If I'd had sense an' wasn't the [illegible]est coot in ten townships I'd have tol' her that them was my sentiments when she nudged me with her elbow at the show,' says Hud. 'Daggone it! I'll never be able to do it,' he says.

"Finerly there was a [illegible] over the [illegible] neck way an' Hud took Sade [illegible] co'se. All the way again there he was a making up his mind to pop, but [illegible] got to the house before he'd done finished makin' it, so he had to finish in the barn while he was puttin' up the team. 'If I don't do it to-night, by gosh! I never will,' he says gritin' his teeth.

"He allowed he'd do it on the way home, but bimeby he thought he seen Sade go into a little cubby-hole off the settin' room where they kep' a stand o' house plants—kind o' bay winder, on'y bigger. So he follers in after; but it was dark, so he wasn't sure she was there until he'd felt his way to the stand an' found her a settin' on a bench beside it. 'Now's the time,' he says, an' sat down by her. She didn't say nothin', on'y pulled her skirts to one side so's he could get closter, an' he got closter.

"'Now's the time, daggone you!' he says to himself. 'Speak up,' he says. But he didn't say nothin' out loud. He broke out all of a sweat an' his knees shook like a thrasher runnin' full speed, so's the flower pots begun to clatter in the dishes they was set in. Still he didn't say nothin'. He jest couldn't.

"Bimeby Sade gin a little sigh an' at that Hud was toook with a bright idea. 'What's the use talkin'?' he says to himse'f, an' he reached out an' put his arm right around her. She didn't say nothin either, on'y gin another little sigh, an' leaned right back with her haid on his shoulder.

The Wrong Girl

"Well, you all know how it was. It seemed like he was floatin' around in a sea of honey with a hundred million [illegible] in his ears an' his chest [illegible] till he was dizzy drunk. He couldn't hardly believe that he'd reely got his arm around her at last, so he kep a-drawin' it tighter an' tighter, until Sade kinder hollered. Then he [illegible] up a little, but not [illegible] an' they sat an' sat an' sat until they heerd the folks back in the livin' room talk about goin'.

"'Where on airth is Hud Jackson and Mariline W[illegible]?' says someone, an' the gal jumps up an' away from Hud an' says 'Here I am. I don't know where Hud is, though.'

"Seemed like it wasn't Sade after all. It was Mariline, an' he'd ast her, as well as he could, if she would, an' she said 'Yes.'"

"How'd he manage to back out of it?" asked old man Somarindyk.

"Shucks! He didn't back out," replied Hancock. "He allowed he wasn't a-goin' through that again, not on no account. He'd get along the best he could with what he'd got."

"Did she know it was Hud?" asked the storekeeper.

"You're entitled to your own opinion about that," replied Hancock.

Gay Season Ahead for Buds

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Debutantes are already so busy glimpsing the glories of their gay season ahead that they have little time left for minor affairs of the present. November and December are their months and they are so close at hand that all their time now must be employed shaking out their frills and fluffs and getting the last of their gowns in readiness, for when the whirl really begins there will be time for nothing save the few necessary hours of rest outside the round of dinners, dances, theatre parties, opera and luncheons.

Among the most prominent of November's debutante affairs will be the reception which Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Richardson give at their Beacon street house on the 9th to introduce their second daughter, Miss Margaret Richardson. Mrs. David Coolidge has also issued invitations for the dance which she is to give on the 29th for her granddaughter, Miss Mary Shepley Coolidge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Coolidge of Marlboro street.

* * *

Another interesting November festivity will be the at home which Mrs. Horace Frazier is to give at her Chestnut Hill house on the 2nd to introduce her two daughters, Miss Eleanor and Miss Marion. On the 21st Mrs. Richard Dow is to present her second daughter, Miss Dorothy Dow at a reception at her Marlboro street house.

* * *

Other debutante events of November, which are already on the schedule, include the reception which Mrs. Wallace Pierce is to give on the 8th for her daughter, Miss Barbara; Mrs. Frederick B. Carpenter's reception for her daughter, Miss Marjorie, on the 17th; the luncheon which Mrs. Edwin Sibley Webster of Chestnut Hill is to give in honor of the four Brookline debutantes, Miss Mary Lee, Miss Hannah Cobb and the Misses Marjorie and Eleanor Frazier and Mrs. Minot Weld's dance at the Tuileries on the 10th for Miss Sally Rackemann and Miss Rose Saltonstall.

* * *

George F. Adams of the Hotel Chamberlain, Fortress Monroe and Mrs. Adams have been recent guests in Boston, stopping at the Touraine en route to Fort Andrews where they are the guests of the commanding officer.

* * *

Announcement was made yesterday of the engagement of Miss Pearl Louise Waitmarsh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence F. Waitmarsh of Bullard street, Dorchester, and William Warren Clark of the same suburb.

The Atlantic Crossed by Balloon

Edgar Allan Poe's Famous "Balloon Hoax."

THE possibility of crossing the Atlantic Ocean by balloon, which Mr. Wellman is attempting to register in the list of accomplished feats, has been debated for generations.

Imagine then—along about the time when a few daring inventors were first beginning to attempt to solve the problem of aviation and the first balloon flights were being made—the surprise of New Yorkers upon reading in the New York Sun that the trip had been made from England to the United States by balloon.

This story, the first instalment of which is printed herewith, was the work of Edgar Allan Poe, and as he wrote in compiling his works for publication in book form: "If, as some assert, the Victoria did not absolutely accomplish the voyage recorded, it will be difficult to assign a reason why she should not have accomplished it."

First Installment.

(Astounding News by Express, via Norfolk!—The Atlantic Crossed in Three Days! Signal Triumph of Mr. Monck Mason's Flying Machine!—Arrival at Sullivan's Island, near Charleston, S. C., of Mr. Mason, Mr. Robert Holland, Mr. Henson, Mr Harrison Ainsworth and four others, in the Steering Balloon, "Victoria," After a Passage of Seventy-five Hours from Land to Land! Full Particulars of the Voyage!

The subjoined jeu d'esprit with the preceding heading in magnificent capitals, well interspersed with notes of admiration, was originally published, as matter of fact, in the New York Sun, a daily newspaper, and therein fully subserved the purpose of creating indigestible aliment for the quidnuncs during the few hours intervening between a couple of the Charleston mails. The rush for the "sole paper which had the news," was something beyond even the prodigious, and, in fact, if (as some assert) the "Victoria" did not absolutely accomplish the voyage recorded, it will be difficult to assign a reason why she should not have accomplished it.]

The Problem Solved by the Victoria.

The great problem is at length solved! The air, as well as the earth and the ocean, has been subdued by science, and will become a common and convenient highway for mankind. The Atlantic has been actually crossed in a Balloon! and this too without difficulty—without any great apparent danger—with thorough control of the machine—and in the inconceivably brief period of seventy-five hours from shore to shore! By the energy of an agent at Charleston, S. C., we are enabled to be the first to furnish the public with a detailed account of this most extraordinary voyage, which was performed between Saturday, the 6th instant, at 11 a. m., and 2 p. m. on Tuesday, the 9th instant, by Sir Everard Bringhurst, Mr. Osborne, a nephew of Lord Bentinck's; Mr. Monck Mason and Mr. Robert Holland, the well-known aeronauts; Mr. Harrison Ainsworth, author of "Jack Sheppard," etc., and Mr. Henson, the projector of the late unsuccessful flying machine—with two seamen from Woolwich—in all, eight persons. The particulars furnished below may be relied on as authentic and accurate in every respect, as, with a slight exception, they are copied verbatim from the joint diaries of Mr. Monck Mason and Mr. Harrison Ainsworth, to whose politeness our agent is also indebted for much verbal information respecting the balloon itself, its construction and other matters of interest. The only alteration in the MS. received has been made for the purpose of throwing the hurried account of our agent, Mr. Forsyth, into a connected and intelligible form.

The Building of the First Balloon.

"Two very decided failures of late—those of Mr. Henson and Sir George Cayley—had much weakened the public interest in the subject of aerial navigation. Mr. Henson's scheme (which at first was considered very feasible even by men of science) was founded upon the principle of an inclined plane, started from an eminence by an extrinsic force, applied and continued by the revolution of impinging vanes, in form and number resembling the vanes of a windmill. But in all the experiments made with models at the Adelaide Gallery, it was found that the operation of these fans not only did not propel the machine, but actually impeded its flight. The only propelling force it ever exhibited was the mere impetus acquired from the descent of the inclined plane; and this impetus carried the machine farther when the vanes were at rest than when they were in motion—a fact which sufficiently demonstrates their inutility; and in the absence of the propelling, which was also the sustaining power, the whole fabric would necessarily descend. This consideration led Sir George Cayley to think only of adapting a propeller to some machine having of itself an independent power of support—in a word, to a balloon; the idea, however, being novel, or original, with Sir George, only so far as regards the mode of its application to practice. He exhibited a model of his invention at the Polytechnic Institution. The propelling principle, or power, was here also, applied to interrupted surfaces or vanes, put in revolution. These vanes were four in number, but were found entirely ineffectual in moving the balloon or in aiding its ascending power. The whole project was thus a complete failure.

"It was at this juncture that Mr Monck Mason (whose voyage from Dover to Weilburg in the balloon 'Nassau' occasioned so much excitement in 1837) conceived the idea of employing the principle of the Archimedean screw for the purpose of propulsion through the air, rightly attributing the failure of Mr Henson's scheme, and of Sir George Cayley's, to the interruption of surface in the independent vanes. He made the first public experiment at Willis's rooms, but afterward removed his model to the Adelaide Gallery.

Propelled by Screw and Planes,

"Like Sir George Cayley's balloon, his own was an ellipsoid. Its length was thirteen feet six inches—height, six feet eight inches—It contained about three hundred and twenty cubic feet of gas, which, if pure hydrogen, would support twenty-one pounds upon its first inflation, before the gas had time to deteriorate or escape. The weight of the whole machine and apparatus was seventeen pounds—leaving about four pounds to spare. Beneath the centre of the balloon was a frame of light wood, about nine feet long, and rigged on the balloon itself with a network in the customary manner. From this framework was suspended a wicker basket or car.

"The screw consists of an axis of hollow brass tube, eighteen inches in length, through which, upon a semi-spiral inclined at fifteen degrees, pass a series of steel wire radii, two feet long, and thus projecting a foot on either side. These radii are connected at the outer extremities by two bands of flattened wire, the whole in this manner forming the framework of the screw, which is completed by a covering of oiled silk cut into gores and tightened so as to present a tolerably uniform surface. At each end of its axis this screw is supported by pillars of hollow brass tube descending from the hoop. In the lower ends of these tubes are holes in which the pivots of the axis revolve. From the end of the axis which is next the car, proceeds a shaft of steel, connecting the screw with the pinion of a piece of spring machinery fixed in the car. By the operation of this spring the screw is made to revolve with great rapidity, communicating a progressive motion to the whole. By means of the rudder the machine was readily turned in any direction. The spring was of great power, compared with its dimensions, being capable of raising forty-five pounds upon a barrel of four inches diameter after the first turn, and gradually increasing as it was wound up. It weighed, altogether, eight pounds six ounces. The rudder was a light frame of cane covered with silk, shaped somewhat like a battle door, and was about three feet long, and at the widest one foot. Its weight was about two ounces. It could be turned flat and directed upward or downward as well as to the right or left; and thus enabled the aeronaut to transfer the resistance of the air which in an inclined position it must generate in its passage, to any side upon which he might desire to act; thus determining the balloon in the opposite direction.

Advice to a Neglected Wife

By WINIFRED BLACK

DEAR WINIFRED BLACK:

My husband is rich enough not to work, yet never has money. I can get anything I want at any store and charge it to him, and when the year's crop comes in the bill is [illegible]

He is [illegible] of numerous clubs, and is away from home almost constantly. I never can expect him. He is very set in his ways, and when I tell him of his neglect he laughs and says I am a suspicious creature.

He never gives me a cent of money. I simply cannot [illegible] because I spend a little [illegible] sends me.

He is getting worse every day. Stays away more and is less pleasant when he is here.

I hate to have my people know; it would break mother's heart, yet it is breaking my health. My [illegible] and my nerves are a wreck.

I don't care for him the same as I did two years ago at our marriage, and every day the feeling is stronger.

God hasn't blessed us with children, and that makes him worse, and angry, too.

What will I do: live with the brute under these circumstances or leave him and disgrace my family and lose my prestige and friends? Please answer your

UNHAPPY ELEANOR.

WELL, my dear girl, what are you going to do about it?

Sit in a corner and make yourself miserable because you have made one big mistake, or rush up and down the world tearing your hair and let every idle curiosity seeker look right into your broken heart?

If I were in your place I would do neither.

You have a pretty home, plenty of friends, a devoted family circle, a good looking and interesting husband.

What if he is indifferent to you? Why aren't you indifferent to him?

You were happy before you ever heard of him, weren't you?

Why do you allow him to make you unhappy now?

From what you say he is evidently not really unkind, simply neglectful and indifferent. Every time you cry and reproach him for his neglect you drive him just that much further away from you.

Why don't you put him right out of [illegible]. Be pleasant and [illegible] agreeable and attractive whenever he does [illegible] home and then promptly forget all about him the instant the door closes behind him.

You need do nothing wrong, nothing to bring one shadow of reproach upon your honest name. You are young, clever, and ought to be light hearted and full of fun.

This man isn't the whole world. He's just one very, very small factor in it.

He took you away from your home, where you were beloved and happy. Now let him take good care of you and you go right on being just as much beloved and just as happy as if you had never heard of him.

You won't be the only woman who smiles amiably at a man to whose presence or absence she is absolutely indifferent.

Set out your garden, open up your home, invite in your friends, go home and visit your mother, take up your piano again. Where are those French lessons you intended to take? Look up some of your girlhood friends, interest yourself in life, and live, and let the man who is neglecting you walk in his own road, in his own way, and never affect you by the quickening of a single beat of your heart.

To-day's Best Story

SISTER JANE lingered with the visitor at the front door, but at last the visitor went [illegible]. Sister Jane tripped lightly [illegible] humming softly [illegible] herself. She wanted to be [illegible] over all the nice things the visitor had said.

[illegible] James [illegible] entered the sitting room slowly and thoughtfully.

"Mamma," he said, "sister's new beau isn't as stingy as I thought he was."

"Isn't he, dear? Well, I'm glad to hear it," answered his mother.

"No," said Brother James, deliberately, "he's stingier."

LAUNDERING CURTAINS

SOAK lace curtains overnight in a tub of lukewarm water to which is added two tablespoons of ammonia and one quarter cake of laundry soap shaved fine. Drain off the water, but do not lift out the curtains, as the water will make them heavy and liable to tear. Pour in another slightly warm water prepared in the same way. Move the lace about and squeeze it, then drain and put in a third suds. Drain and lift carefully into a rinsing water and then into a bluing water. Pass through a wringer, lay over a line until dry, then fasten into curtain frames to dry.

To launder muslin curtains wash them carefully, starch and iron on the wrong side to make them look like new cloth.

THE LAUGHING SATYR

The Story of a Studio Murder Mystery, from "The Veil of Clay," by Meta Simmins

(Copyright in America by London Daily Mail, 1910)

SYNOPSIS.

RICHARD JARDINE, a London sculptor, enters his studio to find Lewis Stuvessant lying dead on the floor, and Beatrice Charters, the girl he loves, leaning over the body. He hides the body in the pedestal of a clay model of "The Laughing Satyr," thinking at first that Beatrice is guilty. Later he breaks open the pedestal to remove the body and finds that it is gone. It turns up in the Thames and is identified both as the body of Lewis Stuvessant and also as the body of the lover of a girl of the embankment settlement.

A dumbbell belonging to Jardine has been used to weight the body. His sister, Constance Knowles, learns of this, and thinks that her brother is the murderer. She decides to tell the police, writes a letter and then tears it up. Mrs. Stuvessant, mother of the murdered man, gets the torn pieces and puts them together. To save Jardine, Beatrice declares that she did the murder. Jardine does not believe it. They decide that they cannot marry until the mystery is cleared. Beatrice goes out to seek work in London.

She gets a position with a hair-dresser, where all she has to do is to sit in a window and show her beautiful hair. She is rescued from this by Dominic Fleury, an artist friend of Jardine's, who gets her a position as nursery governess in the home of Mrs. Harrison.

Sixteenth Instalment

WHILE these events were passing in the struggle that Beatrice Charters made to become independent, Constance Knowles, the widowed sister of Dick Jardine, lived a life of changing hope and fear.

The day Mrs. Stuvessant, the mother of the murdered Lewis, left her house with the scraps of the torn letter, telling of the supposed discovery of the theft. One of the scraps of paper had been dropped at the door of her sitting room, and instinct told her immediately that Mrs. Stuvessant had secured the torn letter.

She rushed madly to the woman's house, forcing herself into her study before she could be announced.

"Ah," Mrs. Stuvessant sneered at her. "I expected you, but not so soon."

She had been pasting the slips of paper together, and as she turned to Constance she quietly hid them with a blotting pad.

"I must have that torn letter," demanded Constance.

"You are too late. I have sent it to Scotland Yard," declared Mrs. Stuvessant, out of sheer cruelty.

But Constance knew better, and was waiting her chance to pounce upon the letter, when Mrs. Stuvessant suddenly lost all command of herself.

"You come here!" she half screamed. "You are as bad as your brother, who murdered my son. You are a murderess. Oh, you hideous——"

The flow of vituperation came to an abrupt stop.

The face of Mrs. Stuvessant began to writhe, her eyes became dull, her fingers twitched. She tried to gasp out a word, as if this would save her from losing the fast vanishing control of her mind.

Horror-stricken at the spectacle, Constance saw the woman waver and fall to the floor, a gibbering maniac.

Quickly Constance stepped to the desk, secured the letter and threw it into the open fire. The flames destroyed every scrap and the wind swept the ashes up the great chimney.

For two weeks Mrs. Stuvessant raved, but there was no coherency to anything she said. Her case seemed hopeless, and Constance called every day to inquire. She feared her recovery and hoped for her death with her mind in chaos.

At the end of the second week she was told that Mrs. Stuvessant showed a great improvement and that she had begun to recognize people about her. The attending physician took Constance to her room.

"Come, Mrs. Stuvessant," he urged his patient. "Here is Mrs. Knowles, who has called to inquire of you every day. Can't you speak a word to her?"

Mrs. Stuvessant's wild eyes glared at Constance. She waved a hand.

"Away!" she ordered in a guttural voice. "Take—her—away."

Constance left the room and the house quickly. She felt that Mrs. Stuvessant was going to cheat death and that more horrible thing, mental oblivion.

Three weeks, the doctor had told her, and Mrs. Stuvessant would be far on the road to recovery. Constance went to her home with a dreadful sinking of the heart.

* * *

THE sun which all the morning had been shining steadily on the back of the cottage into the red-tiled kitchen where Mrs. Garwood waged noisy warfare with crocks and broom had traveled round at last to the opened windows of the sitting room and, looking in, struck with insolent fingers the face of the man who lay there huddled on the long folding chair.

He stirred uneasily, flung up an arm to protect his eyes, but the warm lingering touch was not to be so easily evaded. Presently he stirred again to good purpose, stretched himself in his chair, and stood up yawning, but awake.

The old brass-faced clock standing in the corner had run down, and so had his watch, but as Jardine opened the sitting room door the humble, white-faced American clock in the kitchen struck wheezingly—an interminable number of strokes—12 o'clock.

He moved over to the mantelpiece as though to glance at himself in the strip of copper-framed mirror, but thought better of the intention. He knew very well what he would see there—he had seen it not once or even twice before, after one of the nights of heavy sleep that had come upon him unawares as he lounged in his chair, the curious, capricious sleep that came on him not at his will, but at the will of the mocking little devil that inhabited the small blue-ribbed bottle that no longer skulked and hid away in a loose pocket of the shabby kit-bag upstairs, but flaunted itself unconcernedly, multiplied extraordinarily, for there were empty bottles now as well as an ever full lone.

As he turned away something white lying on the matting in front of the door attracted his eyes. A letter slipped through the slit that did duty for a letter box.

Sitting on the doorstep, he cut it open fastidiously and read it, leaning against the lintel in the sunlight.

The Green Monster

"Ah!" He gave curious little half exclamations as he read the letter through. Once he laughed, but it was bitter-savoring laughter; Beatrice, who had written of the household in Kensington with a light, kindly touch, would have grieved and wondered at the laughter her tender, whimsical letter called forth on the lips of the man she loved.

"Fleury," Jardine muttered. "Seems to me Mr. Fleury has been remarkably active * * *"

What business was it of Fleury's? Who had given him the right to play knight errant? For, though Beatrice had said very little in her letter, Richard Jardine read the letter between the lines.

Besides, he knew Dominic Fleury.

His eyes returned to the closely written letter again, a letter in which a girl disclosed her white soul to the man she loved—but the vision of Dominic Fleury came between him and the written page.

The past fortnight had gone hardly with Richard Jardine. Solitude had played havoc with his nerves—solitude and the lack of sleep and the little mocking devil that had its habitation in the blue-ribbed bottle. Hope had deserted him—the ability to work; he stood at cross roads afraid to think—to look forward or to look back.

But the charm of that tender, womanly letter worked presently; he shook his lethargy off with an effort and went upstairs to his bedroom, from the open windows of which after a while floated the joyful sounds that proclaimed to Mrs. Garwood that her master was astir and bathing and that presently the nondescript meal he called breakfast and she dinner would be required.

Jardine, his meal finished, lighted his pipe and strolled out into the white road fringed by broad strips of green, where buttercups had laid down a carpet of gold for the butterflies to dance upon.

Now, today, when he had no desire or need of companionship, raising his eyes he saw a man coming swinging down the road towards him.

He slowed up as he neared Jardine, glancing at him inquisitively in the country way; as he came abreast of him he stopped short and shot out a large brown hand.

"Richard!" he exclaimed, with a strong Scotch accent. "Richard Jardine, as I'm a sinful man."

"It's easy seeing you're good at forgetting old friends," he said. "Don't you mind David McAndrew?"

"McAndrew! Great Scott, yes! But who in the name of all that's wonderful expected to meet you walking along an English country lane?"

"Oh, there's nothing so wonderful in that," said the man. "I've been settled in these parts for something over six years now. I'm practising in Luxwood.

"As a medico—what else?" I've got rather a good practice—or bad. But it's ill serving two masters, as the Book says"—— He stopped abruptly. "What's your way, and I'll make it mine and talk as we go—or, better still, won't you tramp back to Luxwood with me? I am only out to rest my brain."

Just for a moment Jardine hesitated. He had not started out with the intention of walking to Luxwood, although unconsciously his feet had taken him out on to the road; no doubt they would have carried him there ultimately—he did not consider that possibility. He saw himself brought face to face with a definite temptation, which was quite another thing.

"The Mad Doctor!"

"Well, no," he said. "I don't think I will, if you don't mind, Mac—I've not got quite so much time at my disposal as you appear to have. Turn round with me—I want to show you my cottage, which is by the way of being rather attractive, I think. Can you actually look me in the face and admit that you didn't know I was a neighbor of yours in this district that is like a Cairo bazaar for the transmission of gossip?"

"Oh, ay," he said. "I mind now that I did hear that some artist chap had taken the tumbledown cottage in the street, as they call it. But you can imagine I gave no thought to you. Indeed, I doubt if I would even had I heard your name—it's faces stick in my mind—not names. Same with you, I suppose, for you must have heard of me. * * * ?"

He gave Jardine a sidelong look as he spoke, a look half defiant, half-curious, and as Jardine shook his head he laughed.

"No? Ay, I suppose they don't go the lengths of givin' me a name," he said. "It's the mad doctor—and other endearing titles peculiar to the wit and humor of an English countryside."

"And what's your peculiar form of madness?" he asked dryly.

"Haven't you guessed?" McAndrew stood still in the roadway to light his pipe. "No, not motorin', my mannie. Something a wee bittie more up to date than that. Aerial navigation."

"You go in for airships, then?" he asked. McAndrew nodded.

"Yes. I have never been really interested in the heavier-than-air machines." He took out his pipe and waved it with a comprehensive gesture. "It's the dirigible that counts in warfare, my boy," he said.

McAndrew stopped in the middle of the road.

An Airship Builder

"See here, Dick," he said, earnestly, "come away back with me, and I'll show you somethin' worth seein'. I'll show you my beauty."

"Some other day, Mac."

McAndrew wheeled round.

"Verra well," he said huffily, "but go you own gait—I'm not comin' another foot of the way with you."

Jardine rather than offend his old friend decided to go with him.

He told Jardine a great deal consciously and more unconsciously. He had come in for money a few years back, and since then his practice had dwindled automatically as his interest in dirigibles had increased. He had bought land near Luxwood—land that was useless for any agricultural purposes, that brought forth thistles in abundance, and little else—on which he built his factory and balloon sheds.

He had invented an airship. That was the fact he confided to Jardine as he went. An invention that, if it proved practical, would revolutionize all that concerned dirigible balloons. So far it had not proved practical, Jardine gathered. It had cost an immense amount of money and time, and the things of body and soul that are infinitely more precious than money, but it had achieved nothing.

"But—it's been a time of fearing, learning, learning, Dick," McAndrew broke out fiercely once after a pause following a record of his efforts. "They may call me a failure down here—laugh at me—the empty-headed 'gentry' in the glorified village they call a town; the men about the farms and fields may grin as I pass by—but I'll win through. I am confident of that. It's only out of failure that triumph is born. It always has been so throughout the ages, in nations and in individuals. And every mistake I've made—every fool exhibition of failure that I've given has taught me something. I know that I'll succeed."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Silence in the Wood

By VIOLA TAYLOR

THE woods are dark with many a stem;
I cannot see the leaves,
But in between the ranks of them
Flits something which deceives
Something sinister, sweet and wild,
Something pale and free;
My heart pursued it, when a child,
And now it follows me.

I cannot see its shadowy face,
Too beautiful to see;
I hear its step in many a place
A-tracking after me—
Tracking over a sombre land,
Over a barren hill,
And when I turn to touch its hand
Its huntress foot is still.

I know a little gabled town,
A blue and moonlit street,
Where I go pacing up and down
To wait what I shall meet.
To wait what I shall meet again,
And lo! I felt it pass;
A face behind the window pane
Pressed white against the glass.

And when the lights are out I hear
It moving in the room
And shifting flowers here and there
And stirring in the gloom.
But when the evening lamps revive
I only hear the breeze
A-racing up the garden drive
To quarrel with the leaves.

And when I sleep I feel it come
And stop to look at me,
While on the quilt its fingers strum
A voiceless melody.
And I might toss the clothes and shriek
Where white the moonlight lies—
It would not pity me or speak
Or let me see its eyes.

Bernhardt Laughs at Doctors.

SARAH BERNHARDT, the great actress says she preserves her youthfulness by doing just exactly the opposite of what her doctor tells her to do. When asked how she preserved her strength and youthful appearance she said: "Probably it is because I am always working. I go in for no diet. I eat just what I like—just what I feel I want to. And, yes, above all, I sleep a great deal—oh, ever so much! I don't usually get up early. I take all the sleep I want. I am never ill; I always feel fit, and if ever a doctor tells me to do anything I never do it! To-day I was busy all the morning with my secretary. One hundred and forty-eight letters to read and answer! Yes, 148. I thought I should never finish. Oh, what a fine temper I was in—a dreadful temper! It's a happy thing you didn't see me this morning."

The time to cure kidney trouble is while it is only trouble—before it settles into Dropsy, Diabetes, Gravel or Bright's Disease.

The moment you suspect any kidney, bladder or urinary disorder, or feel a constant or dull aching in the back, sides or loins or the urine is thick, cloudy, offensive or full of sediment, irregular or passage or attended by a sensation of scalding you should begin taking Pape's Diuretic as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, at any price, made anywhere in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure.

Pape's Diuretic acts directly upon the kidneys, bladder and urinary system; cleanses, vitalizes and regulates these ducts, organs and glands, ending at once such miserable symptoms as lame back, prostatic trouble, headache, dizziness, weakness, nervousness, rheumatism and darting pains, inflamed or puffy eyelids, irritability, bilious stomach, worn-out feeling, sleeplessness or uncontrollable urination (especially at night), and other distress.

Don't be miserable another moment with a lame back or clogged, inactive kidneys or bladder misery, for after taking Pape's Diuretic a few days you will be relieved and know all danger is passed.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will vouch for the responsibility of Pape, Thompson & Pape of Cincinnati, Ohio, who prepare Pape's Diuretic—50 cent treatment—sold by every druggist in the world.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Although the market has been advanced sharply, there is no sign of more than moderate distribution on the part of the larger interests. As the big people hold practically all of the stocks available for trading in State Street, the mere fact that the public is loading up is proof that the big people are letting some go, but they are taking them back on the slightest reaction.

$ $ $

There is no evidence yet of what is commonly known as a distributing movement. Of course, should the advance continue so rapidly for another week, the temptation to distribute will be too strong to resist, but with the government policy in connection with corporations definitely fixed as it is, confidence in stocks should come and remain undisturbed for many months.

$ $ $

The information given exclusively in this column more than a week ago is now generally appreciated. It is of the highest importance to know that the government will not begin prosecutions against any corporation which is willing to mend its ways, if, in the opinion of the authorities at Washington, it is violating the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

$ $ $

Standard Oil Company and American Tobacco got a chance to mend their ways and would not. The plight of those corporations serves as a terrible example and it goes without saying that other corporations will listen to the attorney-general should he send a warning note.

$ $ $

Old reports of some deal involving the Chicago Great Western have been revived and, for a specialty, the stock is active. Both classes are selling under the prices at which they were first introduced to the public, and under Morgan management the road is sure of being successful as its neighbors, which formerly starved it to death, now throw business to it because it is one of the family.

$ $ $

Stocks of railroad equipment companies are beginning to turn strong in anticipation of the flood of orders that it is now definitely known will come from the railroad companies as soon as the rate increase is granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

$ $ $

No new reason is needed to account for the recent strength of Steel, and in Reading the rise is based mainly upon the operations of an expert manipulator who is working under the direction of the First National Bank of New York crowd. Nothing new has developed in the Harriman storm except a revival of the rumor that Judge Lovett would soon advocate the promotion of Julius Kruttschnitt to the presidency, the Judge becoming chairman of the board and operating the system much as Judge Gary operates the Steel Trust, of which the presidency is also a secondary office. Persons familiar with the laws of trade and the laws of the United States are of the opinion that the Union Pacific will win in the litigation which the Government has begun on account of the road's ownership of the Southern Pacific.

$ $ $

New York Central is being accumulated quietly because it is now admitted by persons able to speak at first hand about what the Interstate Commerce Commission will do that the road will get an important freight rate increase. Chicago has heretofore been the differential point between Eastern and Western railroads, but it is now understood that Omaha is to be substituted. All the railroads east of Omaha will undoubtedly get an increase. This is an additional reason for the strength of Great Western. The roads west of Omaha may have to be content with what they have.

$ $ $

The appearance of several big blocks of stock on the tape have more than ordinary significance. They not only represent the covering of some of the big shorts, but buying on the part of the larger interests as well. Of course the elimination of many of the more prominent bears means a technical weakening of the market position but this may be remedied later on by renewed short selling.

$ $ $

There is a rumor in circulation whose persistency justifies special reference, to the effect that an important upmove is pending in Southern Pacific. According to the story the stock is very small in loans. A loan approximating $1,000,000 included a good deal of other leaders, but none of Southern Pacific. There is very little of the stock in the Street.

The demand for Pennsylvania does not show any signs of abating. It still has the confidence of the public at large because of the conservative policy of the management and the magnificent record of the company. There is no intimation that the dividend will be increased to 7 per cent right away, but there is no doubt the increase will come in time.

Rumors are current that a Reid pool is now ready to raise the price of Rock Island stock. There is said to be inside knowledge of important accumulation of this Rock Island group for some time, and the way is open for a considerable upward swing. The insiders say it will be quoted at 50 again before the year is over.

Mr. James J. HEAVY SELLING DROPS MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Continuance of heavy selling caused a decline in the market at the opening today, with the result that with but few exceptions standard railroad stocks were quoted losses running from a fraction to a point.

Canadian Pacific was the strong feature of to-day's early trading, opening with a gain of 2 points. This stock was strong and active throughout the early trading of the day. Reading, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and New York Central quoted losses ranging from half to ⅝ of a point during the first half hour of the market. Later part of these losses were wiped out.

Steel opened at 76⅝, a loss of nearly ⅝ of a point over the close of yesterday. During the early trading 4,500 shares of this stock sold at from 76⅝ to 76⅜. That there had been a heavy distribution of this stock in some quarters during the past few days was the reason advanced by conservative brokers for the break in this stock. The industrials were strong, many of them quoting substantial gains. Mercantile Marine preferred rose over one point. National Lead sold at an advance of one point and Atlantic Coast advanced ⅜.

Trading on the curb was quiet at the opening, with prices irregular.

"CHOCOLATE SOLDIER" A HIT AT THE MAJESTIC

New Strauss Opera is Splendidly Mounted and Well Sung.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

It was another case of hands across the sea at the Majestic Theatre last evening when Oscar Straus's Viennese melody linked arms with George Bernard Shaw's Irish wit, and sent you on a delicious journey to operaland to the tunes of "The Chocolate Soldier."

The evolution of the musical play, which has carried us over rough ground, as it moved from the comic opera of other days to the dismal, frothy outpourings that the stage has yielded during the last few years, returned to a sane and sound basis with "The Chocolate Soldier." It was plain last evening that the light opera stage has something substantial to rest upon in its hour of trial. "The Chocolate Soldier" gave ample proof that musical plays do not necessarily slide backwards or downwards.

No Chorus! Ah, Thanks.

And how grateful you were for the absence of that weary voiced opening chorus that even regular first-nighters can never interpret. You were more relieved, however, at the absence of strutting show girls—you didn't even miss her. It was enough that "The Chocolate Soldier" carried its own quality and did not depend upon blonde beauties with figures and vaudeville nonsense to carry it to success. After all, it is quality that counts.

Among other things it might have been noticed that the burden of proof was not altogether up to the actor. The strong composition and the logic of the story made "The Chocolate Soldier" as near actor-proof as anything that has been produced in years. It was impossible to resist either the refreshing melody or amusing book.

Nadine Is Well Sung.

You were not kept waiting for the engaging melodies that hotel orchestras have been serving a la carte for the last twelve months. The aria, "My Hero," gave Miss Grace Drew an early opportunity to get acquainted with her audience. The effect was delicious, and Miss Drew found herself among friends ten minutes after the rise of the curtain. If this interesting young woman felt half as happy as she appeared all of the evening's enjoyment was not on the side of the footlight where the chairs are upholstered. While she lacked volume in voice, it was also true that she was compelled to face tremendously heavy orchestration. She acted the role of the sentimental Nadine with every regard for its demands.

Miss Drew, with Harry Fairleigh, made a complete conquest with "The Letter Song," one of the most effective numbers in the opera. Mr. Fairleigh, who played the "Chocolate Soldier," threw sufficient lung power into his songs to make him eligible for appointment as leading tenor to the South Station. While his vigorous treatment of the role was not displeasing he was hardly the hero you would expect to find in a box of bon bons. He easily caught the comedy spirit of his scenes with Miss Drew, and played them with splendid assurance.

Miss Luneska Is Sprightly.

Gene Luneska was a sprightly young person who couldn't keep quiet. She gave Marche a saucy style that encouraged flirtation. Mildred Rogers, who sang a few times at the Boston Opera House last season, was the Aurelia of the cast. She sang well.

Francis J. Boyle, as the ferocious Captain Massakroff, was not as fierce as his makeup indicated. He kept his audience in good humor, however, and so did George O'Donnell, whose weakness for the women was not in such bad taste as you might suppose. George Tallman played and sang the conceited Major Spiridoff like one bored with his task. He was the only member of the original company who was heard last evening.

"The Chocolate Soldier" is an entertainment of such unusual strength that its success may be taken as a matter of course. It is distinctly musical, overwhelmingly musical. The excellent behavior of the big orchestra of forty pieces, under the direction of A. de Novellis, was one of the real treats of the performance.

GEORGE TALLMAN AS SPIRIDOFF AND GENE LUNESKA AS MASCHA
FRANCIS BOYLE AS CAPTAIN MASSAKROFF
GRACE DREW AS NADINA
HARRY FAIRLEIGH AS LIEUTENANT BUMERLI

Splendid Castle Square Stock Company is Heard in Musical Comedy.

Castle Square.

"The Talk of New York," a ripping musical comedy from the pen of George M. Cohan, already familiar to Boston playgoers, is produced this week with vim and spirit at the Castle Square Theatre. The performance last evening added another to the laurels worn by John Craig for the fine plays which he has been offering the patrons of the Castle Square.

Donald Meek had the role of Kid Burns, the hero, a lively and sporty chap, friend of a millionaire. Mr. Meek kept his lines rattling with his own innate buoyancy and wit, and the singing of his solos evoked much handclapping and called for encores.

Miss Mary Young scored as Grace Palmer in the rapid-fire play of fun of the Cohan brand. She was fascinating in singing, in dialogue or in dancing. Wilfred Young, as Joe Wilcox, showed the usual skillful handling of his part. The others of the cast were capable in their roles. Mr. Craig has announced another week of the musical comedy.

Keith's.

Comedy, pure and wholesome, and plenty of it, characterized the opening of the week's bill at Keith's. Several of the best-known acts now in vaudeville were included in one of the most elaborate bills of the season.

Field brothers, in a dancing act in blackface, opened the long program. They showed a mastery over many entirely new steps which captivated the audience. A one-act comedy entitled "Lucky Jim," presented by the Jane Courthope company, is a handsomely staged and well rendered playlet, which, aside from a strong comedy feature, appeals to the sympathy of the lover of the melodramatic.

"The School of Acting," a one-act farce, played by William H. Murphy, Blanche Nichols and company, is full of ridiculous situations which created a veritable uproar of mirth. Among the other performers whose acts were worthy of more than passing comment were Katherine Nelson and Elizabeth Otto, comediennes and singers; Amoros sisters, acrobatic dancers; Peter Donald and Meta Carson, Scottish entertainers, in song dialogue; Gene Greene, in dialect songs, accompanied by Charles Straight, pianist, and Coleman's dog, cat and pigeon circus.

Boston Theatre.

One of the new features of "Girlies" at the Boston Theatre is the exceedingly funny burlesque on the political upheaval in Portugal.

Park Theatre.

The final week of "Electricity," at the Park Theatre began last evening, with Miss Marie Doro appearing at her best in the delightful comedy.

Colonial Theatre.

"The Arcadians" continues on its merry musical way at the Colonial Theatre, where Julia Sanderson and the big company are providing jolly entertainment.

Shubert Theatre.

Another prosperous week for "The Dawn of a To-morrow" was begun at the Shubert Theatre last evening, where Miss Gertrude Elliott in the role of Glad helped drive away your burdens—if you happened to be carrying any.

Hollis Street Theatre.

The second week of "The Lily" at the Hollis Street Theatre began last evening, with a crowded house extending cordial greeting to Miss Nance O'Neil.

Tremont Theatre.

The engagement of "The Fortune Hunter" at the Tremont Theatre entered upon a new week yesterday. This is a play of good cheer that will drive away dull care.

Globe Theatre.

"The Family" will be given its first presentation in Boston at the Globe Theatre this evening.

Waldron's Casino.

"The Queen of Bohemia" gave many indications of being a show to be reckoned with during its first performance at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday. Miss Jane Salisbury, who headed the cast, made herself a popular favorite with the audience.

Columbia Theatre.

The new attraction at the Columbia Theatre yesterday was "The Broadway Gaiety Girls," who dropped in for a week's frolic. The entertainment moved so briskly and the girls were so good to look upon, that everyone was satisfied with the result.

Grand Opera House.

In "The Turning Point," which began a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House last evening, the audience was treated to a strong drama of modern society. Preston Gibson, the author, made Alexandria the locale of his play and while it laid a strong hand upon modern social problems it was tinged with delicious comedy. An elaborate production added its share to the success of the performance, which was admirably acted by a splendid company.

Gaiety Theatre.

Harry Hastings' "Big Show" came to the Gaiety Theatre yesterday and uncorked a long line of lively burlesque that kept the audience in good spirits during the performance. There were many charming girls and considerable vaudeville in the entertainment.

Howard Athenaeum.

An up-to-date show was found at the Old Howard yesterday when "The Merry Whirl" company made its first appearance there. It was a typical burlesque entertainment, with an attractive list of vaudeville fatures, including Kelly and Adams.

Hub Theatre.

Among the entertainers in the new programme at the Hub Theatre yesterday were the Ten Merry Youngsters and Hammond and Forrester. There was more than vaudeville in the bill, for a new list of pictures was shown.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

"The Dandy Dixies" headed the new bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre yesterday. They were a merry lot of singers. Other vaudeville features and moving pictures completed the bill.

Scenic Temple.

The new programme of vaudeville and moving pictures at the Scenic Temple yesterday included several novelties that were new to Boston audiences.

STAGE STAR TO BE BURIED HERE

Frank E. Aiken, now manager, and one of the best known men of the stage, is dead in New York. The funeral will take place in New York tomorrow and the burial will be in Mount Auburn. He was a friend of Edwin Booth and often appeared with him in romantic and Shakespearian plays. More recently he has been in the support of John Drew under the Charles Frohman management.

12 MOOSE ON FIRST DAY OF THE SEASON

BANGOR, Me., Oct. 18.—The first trains from the game regions after the opening of the moose season brought four big moose, an exceptional record for the opening. The biggest of the lot was a 900-pound bull with a good set of antlers, and was shot by C. C. Merrill of Winn. Benjamin Young of Alton shot a young bull hardly ten miles from the Bangor city limits. Returning hunters to-day say that several more moose have been shot and that no doubt a dozen of the big animals have already been killed.

MORGAN HEADS A BIG MERGER OF RAILROADS

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—In Wall street to-day, J. Pierpont Morgan was being credited with an approaching railroad deal which if carried through will put the financier well up in the Harriman class for merging vast railroad properties.

The Wall street report is that the Morgan interests are planning for the New York Central a vast enlargement of its territory, an enlargement which will take one system into the West Virginia and Pennsylvania coal lands where the Morgan crowd has $20,000,000 invested in coal lands.

The plan as outlined by the financial experts is for the New York Central to purchase the Wabash-Pittsburg terminal properties which would establish the central solidly in Pitsburg.

Then to obtain an outlet to the great lakes by taking control of the Wheeling & Lake Erie, thus sharing in the heavy tonnage to and from the Pittsburg district. The next move scheduled is for a joint control with the Rockefeller interests of Western Maryland and the ownership of the Virginian railway through the purchase by the Lake Shore. The Central could connect with the Virginian by building seventy miles of track.

Boston Surrenders THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER CAPTURES THE CITY

HARK TO THE VOICE OF THE PRESS:

Charles S. Howard, in the Globe—"A crowded audience expressed enthusiastic appreciation of its captivating music and hearty enjoyment of its comedy."

E. F. Harkins, in Journal—"A comic opera with a score that was a delight from beginning to end and a company that was able to sing and act acceptably are a rare combination. If merit counts, 'The Chocolate Soldier' will still be impressing its sweet self upon Boston when the good old maple sugar days come round."

Philip Hale, in the Herald—"It is enough to say that here at last is a thoroughly intelligible, coherent, highly amusing story, a true buffo work, a farce with music. * * * This music has distinction."

AMERICAN WANT "ADS" BRING QUICK RESULTS

SCORE ROUSED FROM SLEEP IN WEST END FIRE

Twenty-two men, women and children, asleep in the four-story brick tenement house at No. 49 Revere street, West End, were roused early to-day when fire was discovered in an air shaft with openings on every floor. Flames shot into the different apartments and women and children ran to the street, screaming and scantily clad.

John Oppenheim proved a hero. Through the smoke-filled halls he ran, awakening people on every floor and aiding women and children to the street to safety. The fire was discovered by Mrs. Mary Firman, who lives on the third floor, and she aroused Oppenheim.

The fire started on the first floor, occupied by S. M. Paley and his wife Goldie, and three children, Rebecca, aged 12; Abraham, 11; and Francis, 7. They were all asleep when Oppenheim pounded on their door yelling "fire." They had barely time to get to the street before flames came into their chambers from the kitchen where the fire started.

On the second floor was Isaac Oppenheim and his family of seven. They were also asleep and were aroused by Mrs. Firman, who first discovered the fire coming in from the opening airshaft. She and her two daughters, Mary Firman, aged 20; and Frances, 15; made their escape by the front hallway, which was filled with smoke.

A FEW PEOPLE DON'T USE AMERICAN WANT ADS

For the same reason that modern methods were once scoffed at by our forefathers, yet, in spite of prejudice, progress has its way. The successful majority employ the "WANT AD WAY" to secure tenants, or buyers, or help, or employment. They employ the AMERICAN, realizing that it is the only paper which will carry their message to nearly all of the people.

Horses and Carriages.

$115 FOR ALL.

HORSE CARRIAGE, SLEIGH

AND ALL STABLE GOODS BEEN USED WITH THIS OUTFIT

BLOOD BAY HORSE, weighs about 1,100, age 8, sound, is a horse that any lady or a lady to harness or drive, very stylish, can road 10 miles an hour and pull a large load, will stand without tying and is fearless of all objects, including automobiles; also nice rubber-tire harness and elegant carriage and nice sleigh; also blankets, robes and foot mats and all the stable goods been used with this outfit; only reason for selling this property is that I have purchased an automobile and I find that some gentleman or lady in search of a first-class team for farm, family or business use will purchase it, as it is in every way as represented, and I will allow a trial of 2 weeks to test it in every way; this outfit is for sale by a private party and horse must have a good home; all this property complete for $115, or will sell horse separate to go into country. Call at stable, 1223 Columbus av., Roxbury Crossing; easy to find; ask any car conductor in Boston and he will direct you; most all cars go to Roxbury Crossing. P. S.—Ask to see the doctor's outfit.

$75 BUYS PRINCESS WILKES

HANDSOME CHERRY MARE, foaled in 1903, weight about 1,075 lbs., round turned and shapely built and very handsome, is standard bred and registered, is a natural roadster of 9, 10 or 11 miles an hour, and has been trial miles in 2.16 and 2.16½ over a half mile track; she has also been halves on the speedway in 1.05; she is worth $100; for a brood mare her breeding cannot be beat, as she is sired by a grandson of George Wilkes; breeding furnished to purchaser; she has not a blemish of any kind, is perfectly fearless of all objects on the road, is very well mannered and will drive with open bridle; I think if she were properly trained and handled, she would trot close to 2.10, as she has not been handled for speed since she was four years old; anyone looking for a first-class speed, family or road horse she is worth $300 to them; I will allow 30 days' trial to anyone that buys her; the reason I am selling is I have purchased a racing automobile. For further information call at my residence, MR. P. BLUETT, 179 West Brookline st., off Tremont st., all Tremont street cars from North or South stations pass the street; ask the conductor. P. S.—Also to the buyer I will sell my buggy, road cart and harness for $25.

$100 CASH BUYS ALL

THIS property, consisting of bay horse, 8 yrs. old, weight 1,075 lbs., fat and pretty, can road 10 miles an hour, safe and clever and fearless of all known objects, including autos; one rubber tired open buggy, in first-class condition; also one open speed buggy in fine condition; all brass mounted, rubber trimmed harness built by Mark Cross, as good as new; also robes and blankets and all stable utensils; now anybody looking for a first-class outfit will do well by calling and looking over this property, as it cost me $375 one year ago; the only reason for selling is that I have purchased an auto. Can be seen by calling at PRIVATE STABLE, rear of 661 Mass. av., to the right of Washington st.; take Elevated train from North or South stations to Northampton st., or any Washington st. surface and it is one minute's walk from station. P. S.—Will not sell to dealers as I want the horse to have a good home, with a trial of two weeks to responsible parties.

$100 BUYS DRIVING OUTFIT.

WE TOOK this outfit in part trade for an automobile as we deal in automobiles and not in horses, we have no use for this outfit and will sell at the above price. The outfit consists of an elegant bay horse, wt. 1,135, age 8, long tail and mane, fearless of all objects, including automobiles; gentle and kind, can be driven and handled by the most timid person; will work in any kind of rig and road 12 miles an hour on his courage; this horse cost me $200 one year ago and is just as good to-day; also rubber tired runabout, cost new $125, custom made, brass mounted, 2 minute harness, made to order at a cost of $65 one year ago; all stable tools, hay and grain, and a lot of extras. Can be seen and driven to the satisfaction of buyer by applying at LANGHAM GARAGE, 9 East Springfield st., cor. Washington st.; take Elevated to Northampton st. and walk two blocks north, or take any Washington st. surface car. P. S.—No dealers need apply, as I want the horse to have a good home; two weeks trial will be given buyer.

A Great Spirit Has Passed

JULIA WARD HOWE lived so long and so well that she became a kind of national institution—a permanent organ of the country's life.

The America of to-day and to-morrow would be a somewhat different thing if this everlastingly young old woman—with her aristocratic democracy, her conservative radicalism, her home-loving cosmopolitanism and her unconquerable common sense—had not lived here.

The Aspasias, Catherines, Elizabeths and De Staels have had their day and made their places in Old-World history.

But no single personality sums up the genius of the New World, on its woman-side, as does Julia Ward Howe.

Wherever she appeared in public in her latter years, assemblages of people—whether few or thousands—felt and acted on a unique and common impulse to rise to their feet and do her an homage that was full of reverence and delight.

The homage was not paid to her years—but to her thrilling conquest of years.

Mere age does not go for much in this country. But the youth that fights on for nine decades with eager intellect and passionate heart—how could an American crowd refrain from cheers and tears of admiration?

The air of her presence was tense with the victories of the spirit. She was herself a battle-hymn.

She never doddered and she never preached.

She was learned, beyond most of the professors—but no blue-stocking.

She spanned the generations—with the soul of a girl.

By Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson.

I feel so deeply over her death that I fear I cannot express what I would wish to. She had such a wonderful power of life I felt she would keep on and outlive us all. No woman in Boston is to be compared with her. I think of all persons in great old age she was the most original and inexhaustible. I have several times been connected with her on different things. It is remarkable that, although she was very deaf and could not hear a word that was said at the meetings of the Authors' Club, of which she was president, when I handed her a summary she invariably had something to offer instantly, as though she had heard it all. Because of her inexhaustible freshness no one will be so missed. She was admired by all. People always arose when she came in, and they sang her song. All that does not get you to the end. She was the most original, fresh, inexhaustible woman I ever knew.

By the Rev. Dr. William H. van Allen.

Pastor of the Church of the Advent.

Literary Boston will never be the same without Mrs. Howe. She had so long perpetuated the best traditions of the great days by her own radiance of presence that it was easy for the present generation to realize what those days must have been; it seemed as if time had only enthroned her upon a tableland of perpetual vigor and enthusiasm; years had no power to chill the heart and brains unchangeably young. She was a great and gracious lady, first among her sex in the Commonwealth and sure of an undying memorial so long as the Republic sings her battle hymn.

By the Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ames.

Pastor of the Church of the Disciples, Which Mrs. Howe Attended.

Through the storm and stress of the world Mrs. Howe has always kept afloat, finding a life preserver in her faith, hope and love. I remember that Mrs. Howe said to me not very long ago: "The lower I drain the cup of life the sweeter it grows; all the sugar is at the bottom." She was a victorious personality "with a heart for any fate."

By Laura Drake Gill.

The college women of America bring reverent tribute to one who now "Belongs to the ages." With the shock of the news of our loss there comes the memory of the ringing words spoken at Gettysburg by out great prophet of freedom. It is in the spirit of their consecration that we bring our offering to one who labored long and patiently for a new birth of freedom for every human being, and who kept the faith with childlike simplicity unto the end. While it is fitting that we pay our homage, yet we can add nothing to the triumphs of her life. "It is for us, the living, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work thus far so nobly advanced."

By John T. Trowbridge.

I am astounded at the news of Mrs. Howe's death. These lines fully express my feelings:

She sang the battle hymn that rings
Down the long corridors of Time.
Her life-long human service sings
Of peace, anthem more sublime.

By Miss Georgie A. Bacon.

President State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Julia Ward Howe, the highest type of American womanhood, clear in her vision, broad in her outlook, keen in her intellect, she gave to the world messages that will live forever in the hearts of the American people. With faith unwavering she advanced those causes which seemed to her just and right, and as founder, first president and honorary president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, she did much for organized womanhood. Her foresight, her wisdom, her words of cheer and her encouragement will remain a pleasant memory and an inspiration to every club woman in the land.

By Booker T. Washington.

No race of people ever had a warmer or more steadfast friend than my race had in Julia Ward Howe. I question whether any single piece of literature ever had the effect in bringing about the freedom of a whole race as was true of Mrs. Howe's "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." The name of Julia Ward Howe is known in every corner of the South and among all classes of colored people throughout the United States, and no people will grieve more on account of her death or feel more grateful for her life than the 10,000,000 negroes in Ameerica.

By the Rev. Dr. S. M. Crothers.

Pastor First Parish Church of Cambridge.

Mrs. Howe filled a place that was all her own. She symbolized by her very presence what was best in American life. There was a largeness of sympathy in her literature and at the same time a delicacy of sentiment. She was a reformer with zeal for reform that had no bitterness nor scorn for the conservative. Her unfailing humor in her later years gave her a charm of youth. In her religion she illustrated the faith of Channing and James Freeman Clarke.

By Alice Stone Blackwell.

Mrs. Howe was a woman of beautiful spirit and of international sympathies. She was interested in the cause of the oppressed all over the world. Even in her advanced age she would exert herself to come to a meeting in Faneuil Hall in behalf of Russian freedom, to welcome Mrs. Breshkovsky or to protest against Armenian massacres. She was an earnest advocate of woman suffrage in the days when it was far more unpopular than now.

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

Promiscuous Giving a Temporary Makeshift

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

WHILE not believing that newspaper controversies are usually very profitable, either to the disputants or to the public, yet I am going to allow myself a few words of rejoinder to the criticism, passed by "One Who Has Received as Well as Given," on my recent article in regard to "Poverty and Its Remedy."

I regret that he should have felt disposed to commence his reply by vituperating, even in a mild way, the author of the article upon which he reflects. Charity—a virtue which he eulogizes, and in terms none too emphatic—does not consist simply in giving pennies to the poor, but also in cherishing toward others that gracious reluctance to think of them belittingly, so exquisitely set forth by St. Paul in his Epistle to the Corinthians.

Our correspondent's gentle introductory fling is expressed in the words, "Dr. Parkhurst is probably more at home in the pulpit than on the sidewalk."

I am not a recluse. He has evidently a very faulty understanding of the habits of my life, and if he will come and keep with me a month, I will engage to give him an amount of sidewalk practice that will perfectly satisfy his idea of perambulation.

A Critic of Charity Who Shows None Himself

He adduces two reasons as probable explanation of my failure to understand the matter discussed in my article, as follows:

"That he was never in need of a dime himself to satisfy real hunger; and, second, that he has never been in the habit of giving to the poor and needy and watching results."

Now, in reply to that calumniating innuendo, I would like to say, gently and graciously, but with a little justified indignation, that he knows me no better than I know him, and that for him to charge a man whom he does not know with being the heartless and penurious wretch that such language implies is to indulge in a bit of vitriolic spirit that seems sadly out of keeping with the generous impulse that characterizes a good deal of his article.

Perhaps he does not intend all that his language implies. My desire to credit him with courtesy and good breeding leads me to believe that he does not. One does not like to advertise his good works, but for thirty years I "have been giving to the poor of this city and watching results." I have been giving to the poor in sums varying from one to ten dollars, and been doing it all that time.

I have regularly given as a loan, thinking thus to reduce the humiliation of it, though rarely expecting to get it back, and only twice in the course of almost a third of a century have I gotten it back. Besides that, in urgent cases, I have for thirty years been giving small sums on my correspondent's "sidewalks," which I travel several miles a day.

I am not altogether an amateur. I was not brought up in a monastery, nor do I spend most of my time in the ecclesiastical edifice at the corner of Madison avenue and Twenty-fourth street. What I wrote I wrote on the impulse of a theory, but as the result of what I have learned by "giving to the poor" and "watching the effects" of my giving.

Relief of Poverty is Only a Temporary Makeshift

Now, that disposes of nine-tenths of my disputant's article, which was written on the assumption that I live so apart from the world as not to know what sort of a world it is and what sort of people live in it; that I carry a heart, or some cheap substitute for a heart, that may be theoretically affectionate, but practically insensible; that while it may be that, in conformity with my ordination vows, I preach charity, I leave it to my congregation to practice it, and that if a man is hungry I am willing to see him starve rather than inconvenience myself by passing out a nickel to relieve him.

Now, to return, in a word to my original proposition, which is true to theory and true to life, that gratuities bestowed upon a poor man, while sometimes necessary, do have the tendency to confirm in him the habit of poverty.

Ten cents bestowed on a pauper on the sidewalk will relieve immediate hunger, and that is all that it will do, save that it will encourage him to ask another dime the next time hunger overtakes him. It relieves poverty, but does nothing toward destroying it.

Poverty is not a man's normal condition, and gratuities, however necessary they may sometimes be, should, in the interest of the mendicant, be looked upon purely as a makeshift and to be bestowed in a way to make him ashamed at having to receive them rather than delighted at finding some one who is considerate enough to be willing to confer them.

If there is any difference between me and my correspondent it lies in this, that while he thinks primarily of taking care of people when they are hungry my thought is devoted particularly to taking care of people in such a way that they will not NEED to get hungry.

The Pilot-Fish

A WHALE OF A STORY

By WEX JONES

CAPTAIN COBBLESTONE was a red-faced, choleric old duck, who liked to live aboard his yacht, the Snark. Captain Cobblestone had been in the navy, but had resigned on account of the inferior cooking one so often finds aboard a seagoing ship not entirely designed for passengers. Cooking was the pet hobby of the Snark's skipper. He spent hours in the galley trying to make an omelette; but, as he usually broke the eggs on the deck, his efforts were far from successful. However, he made a fair Irish stew, as all he had to do was to put a little bit of everything into a large pot and boil it.

The sailing master of the Snark was Ole Oleson, a hardy Swedish mariner, who had been at sea so long that he only felt comfortable on land when a violent earthquake was going on. Ole had brought up the Cobblestone girls from infancy, and well had he grounded them in all the fashionable accomplishments—pulling an oar, reefing a foretop gallant studdingsail, belaying a binnacle, splicing the mainbrace, and so forth.

Cissie was the eldest girl, Euphrosyne next and Pauline was the baby. Having been brought up at sea, all three were singularly frank and free in expressing their opinions. Each, of course, was of dazzling beauty, Cissie seeming to attract the most admirers, however. Some even risked a rough trip abroad the Snark to be near her, little heeding that a limp and dejected landsman in a seaway is no object for a sailor girl's love.

Euphrosyne was reclining upon the binnacle, her supple, young figure resting easily against the spanker boom. Suddenly she started.

"Shiver me timbers!" she exclaimed in a voice of rare charm. "Blow me, if 't'sn't the Daffydil!"

The object of her remarks was a small canoe which had just entered the harbor. For three years the Daffydil had followed the Snark from Bermuda to Etah, from Larchmont to Cowes. At every stopping place a poem from the Daffydil's skipper was sent aboard the Snark, addressed to Miss Cissie Cobblestone. One poem read:

Your eyes are as blue as the ocean's hue;
Your nose is an artist's dream;
Your cheeks are as pink as anything I can think,
And your mouth is surely a scream.

Captain Cobblestone would not have approved of this poetic idea, but he didn't know anything about it, and so his mind was free for the graver problem of how to boil potatoes without making them hard.

As for the Daffydil's skipper, we may tell you that his name was Ciderpress. His hair was about the length of Buffalo Bill's and bright yellow in color. His eyes were also yellow. His skin was a fascinating yellow. He would sit on his canary-colored bunk aboard the canoe reciting his verses until Hans, the Finny deckhand, would mutter grimly to himself, "Who's loony now?"

(To be concluded.)

Essence of "Ivanhoe"

By C. B. QUINCY

SCOTT'S novels, "with all the tedious descriptions left out" and the stories boiled down as much as possible, are soon to be given to the world by an enterprising publisher, who knows what the public wants. The scheme is an excellent one, and we hope it will be carried out on a large scale. From recollection of "Ivanhoe," a desiccated novel, suitable for rush-hour reading in the subway, might be evolved in some such fashion as this:

Richard, the Lion-hearted. Large man, fond of scrapping.
Ivanhoe. Young man who had a row with his dad.
Athelstane. Large man who likes his grub.
Wamba. A professional humorist who doesn't humorize very successfully.
The Templar. A fast young man with a thorough knowledge of three-card monte and other such amusements.
Cedric. An Anglo-Saxon from Anglo-Saxony.
Gurth. A son of toil with a great wallop.
Robin Hood. A hold-up man.
Rebecca. A brunette.
Rowena. A blonde.

Nothing much happens until all hands gather at a tournament. Ivanhoe gets mixed up with a bunch of them, and gets the decision in each case.

They have a free-for-all subsequently, and all scrap until Richard knocks over a lot of them.

Robin Hood shoots an arrow into a target.

Ivanhoe lies wounded in a castle—name omitted for brevity.

Rebecca, true to the habits of her sex, is rubbering out of the window. She tells Ivanhoe a gang is trying to break into the castle. The help is throwing rocks at them. "Ha," she says, "one big guy kicks in the door." "Ha," replies Ivanhoe, "Who's loony now?"

'Tis, indeed, the large man fond of scrapping.

More fighting occurs later.

Ivanhoe marries Rowena, and they live Anglo-Saxonly ever after.

The book is very instructive as a model of how not to write a story, as few readers care to peruse it more than once a year from the age of ten up.
